DEATH TAKES MAYOR CERMAK

CHICAGO CHIEF LOSES BATTLE WITH WOUNDS

Bullet of Assassin Proves Fatal.

Miami, Fla., March 6 (Monday). — (Special.) — A special train leaving Miami at 8 o'clock tonight will carry the body of Mayor Cermak to his home city, it was announced at 7 o'clock this morning. The train is scheduled to arrive in Chicago on Wednesday morning. Arrangements for the funeral are to be discussed this afternoon by members of the family.

Jackson Memorial Hospital, Miami, Fla., March 6 (Monday). — (Special.) — Mayor Anton J. Cermak, shot by an assassin on Feb. 15, went to his death this morning. His stout heart gave up the fight at 5:57 o'clock (Chicago time).

For nineteen days his heart had persistently kept the spark of life in a body convulsed by intestinal disorders, ravaged by fever and pain, and pierced by a bullet fired by Guiseppe Zangara who intended to assassinate Franklin D. Roosevelt, then President elect and now President of the United States.

End Comes Peacefully.

The end came peacefully. The mayor of Chicago slipped into a coma shortly before midnight. From then on he recognized no one, did not know that members of his family were grouped at his bedside. Only a faint gasping disturbed the quiet of the sickroom and informed the watchers that life still lingered in the body.

Somewhere in the hospital, about 2 o'clock in the morning, a newly born infant's cry broke the stillness. One life had entered the world as another was making a labored exit.

The watch continued. The daughters wept silently, hopelessly. The men in the room stared at the floor, averting their gaze from the form on the bed. Two nurses hovered over the dying man, gently dabbing his lips with cotton.

Daughters at Bedside.

Suddenly it was over. The mayor's head fell suddenly to one side, the eyes still half open. There was no last dramatic upheaval as life fled the body. Death came to him silently, peacefully. He had breathed his last and when a nurse had closed the staring, tired eyes, dignity descended upon the gray face with the bold defiant nose so characteristic of the indomitable spirit of the man.

At the bedside when he died were his three daughters, Mrs. Richey V. Graham, Mrs. Floyd Kenlay and Mrs. Frank Jirka, and their husbands, the mayor's sons-in-law. Other relatives present were Joseph Cermak, his brother, and Mrs. Joseph Cermak and Mrs. John Kallal, his sister.

Faithful Friends There.

Four others were there, faithful friends all. They were Ald. James B. Bowler and William P. Haberkorn, sergeant-at-arms of the Illinois senate, who have maintained a 24 hour watch during the mayor's illness; County Commissioner Charles H. Weber, who arrived only yesterday after having left the mayor in Florida the day before the shooting, and

DEPARTMENT STORE HEAD ADVERTISES FAITH IN U. S. BANKS

New York, March 5.—[Special.]—Faith in the ability of President Roosevelt to meet the problems of the present economic situation is expressed by Jesse Isidor Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., in an advertisement published this morning.

Mr. Straus set down a code which he, as a citizen, is following. It follows:

I trust my government.

I trust our banks.

I do not expect the impossible.

I shall do nothing hysterical.

I shall act as nearly as I can to normal. If it is normal to carry little cash in my pocket when there is plenty to go round, I shall carry little now. There never was a time when every one on earth could possess all his cash in his pockets, his socks, his safe deposit box, or anywhere else.

I know that if I try now to get all my cash, I will certainly make matters worse.

I will not stampede. I will not lose nerve. I will keep my head.

Every day, every hour, can make a turn for the better. This day can be the turning point of our country's future. It is up to every citizen.

ROOSEVELT'S SON NEARLY KEPT OUT OF WHITE HOUSE

Washington, D. C., March 5.—(AP)—A dilapidated touring car drew up at the front door of the White House today and stopped.

"Drive on, drive on!" said a police sergeant of long experience at that spot.

"But I'm stopping here," said the young driver.

"Who are you?" queried the policeman.

"John Roosevelt," was the answer.

Chicago Food Supply Ample; Rise Forecast

Supplies of foodstuffs in the Chicago market are ample to provide for the needs of the metropolitan area for ten days or longer. The bank holiday and shortage of cash are expected, however, to cause an increase in prices of food products this week.

This was the consensus last night of wholesale and retail food dealers, officials of packing concerns and commission merchants, all of whom expressed the belief that the cash shortage and chaotic credit situation are merely temporary obstacles to normal business and will be straightened out within a few days, regardless of any extension of the bank moratorium.

Adequate Food Assured.

According to the leaders, the food industry in Chicago, long established as "the nation's market basket," is in a position to weather a far more serious economic storm than it has yet had to face before its credit system will be so impaired that an adequate food supply will not be available in this area.

Don M. Geyer, secretary of the Pure Milk association, composed of 18,000 dairy farmers, said last night that "although the credit situation between farmers and dealers is serious, this is an internal problem of the industry and will not affect Chicago's milk supply for a considerable period of time.

"The milk producers," he said, "are waiting for payment on the February accounts. The dealers' money is in the banks. A conference between the dealers and farmers yesterday resulted in an agreement to continue business as usual, however."

Meat Supplies Ample.

Officials of the packing industry said last night that there are ample supplies of fresh and cured meats and live stock in Chicago to take care of all needs for a considerable period.

Wholesale grocers and large retailers reported that within the last few days a heavy demand has developed for canned goods and staples, such as sugar, flour and coffee. The reserve supplies of all such foodstuffs, it was said, are sufficient to meet the increased demand.

Because of a well established credit system inaugurated several years ago, the shippers of citrus fruits in Florida and California, most of whom belong to growers' associations, have been unaffected by the general bank moratorium. Chicago commission merchants said no interruption in fruit shipments to this market is in prospect.

The perishable foodstuffs, such as tomatoes and lettuce, they said, might be somewhat curtailed because a large be somewhat curtailed. There is no shortage of perishables at present.

Trading in fresh butter and eggs in the Chicago market, in spite of the fact that the mercantile exchange closed with the establishment of the moratorium, has been little affected.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Informed of President Roosevelt's declaration of a national banking holiday Chicago financial leaders moved quickly last night to provide in some fashion for the currency and credit needs of the community during the emergency.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago announced that an office would be opened this morning in the old banking quarters of the National Bank of the Republic at 126 South La Salle street for the exchange of currency. Millions of dollars' worth of paper money of small denominations and subsidiary currency will be available to the public for exchange.

Postal Savings Open.

Officials of the local postal savings department stated that they would open their Chicago offices as usual this morning to meet withdrawal demands of depositors.

Meanwhile Chicago bankers were rushing tentative plans for the issuance of clearing house certificates as emergency currency in case it should be decided later that such scrip should be put out. Commitments were made with engravers and printers, both in Chicago and New York, for the production of these certificates.

It was carefully explained, however, that members of the clearing house have not yet definitely decided upon the issuance of scrip. They were merely taking the necessary precautions to insure the availability of adequate mechanical facilities in case they should decide upon such issuance during the next day or two.

Guard Against Forgery.

Several days at least would be required to get certificates engraved sufficiently well to give reasonable assurance against forgery, one clearing house officer explained.

"We don't know whether we're going to have certificates or not," this officer said, "but we're going to be ready. With cities all over the country suddenly deciding to print a lot of certificates there probably wouldn't be enough printing presses and engravers in the country to fill all orders promptly."

Melvin A. Traylor, chairman of the Chicago clearing house committee and president of the First National bank, and James R. Leavell, president of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, yesterday were in Washington attending a conference of bankers, treasury officials and reserve bank officials.

Horner Goes East.

Gov. Henry Horner, who early Saturday morning proclaim 'd a three day banking holiday for Illinois, left yesterday for Washington, where he will attend the conference of governors today.

The new national banking holiday lasting through Thursday night supersedes the Illinois holiday as well as those of all other states. The Roosevelt order means that banks in Illinois will not follow Gov. Horner's order to pay out not less than 5 per cent of deposits beginning Wednesday morning.

Scores of bank officers held conferences yesterday in the various banks and in the clearing house and the federal reserve bank seeking the answer to a multitude of operation problems that have arisen as a result of the various holiday orders.

Everybody was looking to Washington for answers to the questions that came up, for until President Roosevelt's program became known no one knew what plans to make.

PROCLAMATION BY ROOSEVELT MAPS PROGRAM

Washington, D. C., March 5.—(AP)—The full text of President Roosevelt's proclamation on the banking situation follows:

"Whereas, there have been heavy and unwarranted withdrawals of gold and currency from our banking institutions for the purpose of hoarding; and

"Whereas, continuous and increasingly extensive speculative activity abroad in foreign exchange has resulted in severe drains on the nation's stocks of gold; and

"Whereas, these conditions have created a national emergency; and

"Whereas, it is in the best interests of all bank depositors that a period of respite be provided with a view to preventing further hoarding of coin, bullion, or currency, or speculation in foreign exchange and permitting the application of appropriate measures to protect the interests of our people; and

"Whereas, it is provided in section 5 [B] of the act of Oct. 6, 1917 [40 Stat. L. 411], as amended, 'that the President may investigate, regulate, or prohibit, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, by means of licenses or otherwise, any transactions in foreign exchange and the export, hoarding, melting, or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency,' . . .; and

"Whereas, it is provided in section 16 of the said act 'that whoever shall willfully violate any of the provisions of this act or of any license, rule, or regulation issued thereunder, and whoever shall willfully violate, neglect, or refuse to comply with any order of the President issued in compliance with the provisions of this act, shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $10,000, or, if a natural born person, imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both,' . . .

"Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, in view of such national emergency and by virtue of the authority vested in me by said act and in order to prevent the export, hoarding, or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency, do hereby proclaim, order, direct, and declare that from Monday, the sixth day of March, to Thursday, the ninth day of March, nineteen hundred and thirty-three, both dates inclusive, there shall be maintained and observed by all banking institutions and all branches thereof located in the United States of America, including the territories and insular possessions, a bank holiday, and that during said period all banking transactions shall be suspended.

"During such holiday, excepting as hereinafter provided, no such banking institution or branch shall pay out, export, earmark, or permit the withdrawal or transfer in any manner or by any device whatsoever, of any gold or silver coin or bullion or currency or take any other action which might facilitate the hoarding thereof; nor shall any such banking institution or branch pay out deposits, make loans or discounts, deal in foreign exchange, transfer credits from the United States to any place abroad, or transact any other banking business whatsoever.

"During such holiday, the secretary of the treasury, with the approval of the President under such regulations as he may prescribe, is authorized and empowered [a] to permit any or all of such banking institutions to perform any or all of the usual banking functions, [b] to direct, require or permit the issuance of clearing house certificates or other evidences of claims against assets of banking institutions, and [c] to authorize and direct the creation in such banking institutions of special trust accounts for the receipt of new deposits which shall be subject to withdrawal on demand without any restriction or limitation and shall be kept separately in cash or on deposit in federal reserve banks or invested in obligations of the United States.

"As used in this order the term 'banking institutions' shall include all federal reserve banks, national banking associations, banks, trust companies, savings banks, building and loan associations, credit unions, or other corporations, partnerships, associations or persons, engaged in the business of receiving deposits, making loans, discounting business paper or transacting any other form of banking business."

Congress Called to Meet Thursday in Money Crisis.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 5.—(Special.) — President Roosevelt today called the 73d congress to meet in extraordinary session next Thursday and tonight proclaimed a national holiday in bank operations ending next Thursday midnight.

In a proclamation designed to steady the financial situation until congress can act, the President invoked the powers conferred on the executive by the war time "trading with the enemy act" of 1917 to put an end to domestic hoarding and foreign withdrawals of gold.

Treasury in Control.

By the proclamation all banking business is placed under the regulation of the secretary of the treasury.

Restrictions are placed on withdrawal of deposits already in the banks, but provision is made for unrestricted withdrawal of deposits made from tomorrow morning.

The effect of the proclamation is to take the country off the gold standard for the period of the holiday, at least, for the reason that gold will not be procurable upon demand by the holders of obligations of the government requiring redemption in gold.

Program in Detail.

Specifically the proclamation does the following things:

1. Establishes a bank holiday, national in scope, beginning tomorrow morning and ending Thursday midnight.
2. Suspends during the holiday all banking transactions except such as are permitted by the secretary of the treasury.
3. Prohibits hoarding.
4. Suspends specie payments.
5. Declares an embargo on the export of gold.
6. Authorizes the secretary of the treasury to permit performance of all banking functions under such regulations as he may impose.
7. Authorizes issuance of clearing house certificates or other forms of scrip to be used in place of currency.
8. Authorizes segregation of new deposits which may be drawn upon by depositors without restrictions.
9. Postal savings funds are not directly under the provisions of the order, but may be temporarily inaccessible due to closing of banks acting as depositories.

Conferences All Day.

All day leading bankers of the country, Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin, and members of the federal reserve board were in session at the treasury working out the plan for dealing with the crisis which was eventually embodied in the President's proclamation.

In the meantime Mr. Roosevelt had held a meeting of his cabinet and had called in Democratic and

Npt since 1861 has a newly inaugurated President been called upon to cope with a national crisis of such magnitude on the first day of his administration.

The plan of action emerged from three hectic sessions of the financial powers that he assembled at the treasury. There were Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank of Chicago, and a dozen other bankers of national reputation. There was the new secretary of the treasury, William H. Woodin. There were his predecessor, Ogden L. Mills, and the holdover undersecretary of the treasury, Arthur Ballantine. And there were Gov. Eugene Meyer and other members of the federal reserve board.

All sorts of plans for reopening the banks of the country under conditions that would preclude a revival of the disastrous drain of deposits by hoarders were discussed and thrown aside.

Eventually the conferees united on the plan for creating the secretary of the treasury a virtual banking dictator under authority derived from the almost forgotten trading with the enemy act which was passed by congress in 1917 to enable the executive to protect the country's gold reserve.

A decade ago most of the war time legislation clothing the executive with autocratic powers was repealed, but this act was exempted, partly because of the foresight that it might be needed in some such emergency as that which exists today.

The trading with the enemy act empowers the President to prohibit the hoarding and export of gold and imposes severe penalties for violation of the regulations issued thereunder.

Ruling on Hoarding.

Treasury officials say that full limit of government powers will be exercised to stop further hoarding. There will be no retroactive action, however. That is, the government will not interfere with existing hoards.

But it will enforce the President's proclamation against further hoarding under the authority of the trading with the enemy act. Under the terms of this act, it is stated, the government could force open safety deposit boxes to recover gold hoardings accumulated in defiance of the proclamation.

It was made clear that the control of banking operations decreed by the proclamation is merely stopgap until congress can act. President Roosevelt said that he would have a program for dealing with the situation to submit to congress on Thursday. It is the purpose of the administration to rush remedial legislation through congress the day it meets, but in the event of delay the holiday proclaimed by the President will be extended.

Even before the proclamation was issued the treasury officials were at work on the formulation of the regulations under which banks will be permitted to open, regulations governing the making of new deposits which can be drawn on without restriction, and governing the use of scrip in place of money. It was stated that some of these regulations would be ready for promulgation tomorrow morning.

Now that the bank holiday has been proclaimed, the big job, said one official, will be to get the banks open on terms that will prevent a recurrence of the panic that precipitated their closing.

Ask for Confidence.

Seated beside Undersecretary Ballantine and surrounded by treasury executives temporarily held over from the Hoover administration, Secretary Woodin in a midnight interview called for nation-wide confidence in the ability of President Roosevelt to halt the bank panic and place the country again solidly upon its feet.

"This," he declared, "is the start of the real thing. We are on the bottom now. This order today represents the real start up. If the people will only have courage and confidence in the great leader now in the White House we'll get out of our troubles very rapidly."

The late newspaper conference tonight was arranged at the request of reporters who had been watching since early morning the coming and goings from the treasury of many of the nation's great in the banking world. Arriving at the secretary's office, newspaper men found Mr. Woodin chatting and laughing with Mr. Ballatine. The newly fledged cabinet member was dressed simply in a blue sack suit, blue striped shirt with collar to match and a blue polka dot tie. His thinning gray hair was slightly ruffled. Despite his newness to the office and to the rapid fire methods of reporters, Mr. Woodin exuded a willingness to discuss what had been done.

"Closed Up Tight."

"Well, things are closed up tight for four days," he volunteered. "I suppose you have seen the proclamation?"

"This does not mean that the banks are to stay closed, does it? Haven't you certain powers to reopen them?"

"That's right," responded the cabinet member. "The secretary is authorized to open things up a little."

"When will that be done?"

"You will have to give us a little time. We have to work out plans and regulations. We have to proceed slowly. Many questions of policy remain to be decided."

In response to another question Mr. Woodin said the secretary of the treasury could permit such operations as he finds consistent with the general situation.

"Can you get things going in the morning?"

"That's a pretty big order," was the reply.

"I think we will have things in pretty good shape by tomorrow."

"Working Pretty Hard."

"The secretary has been working pretty hard," he explained smiling. "You will have to give him a break. He's only been here a short time and we've kept him up until around 3 o'clock each morning. He ought to get some sleep tonight."

A chuckle shook the secretary's slight figure as he recalled something along that line the President had just said. Then he turned toward his callers.

"I asked the President this afternoon if this job kept overtime hours like this all the time. He just laughed and when I left he said, 'Now you go home and go to bed.' That was mighty sweet of him."

"The big thing we are trying to do is stop hoarding," said Mr. Ballantine, amplifying the White House statement.

"We are off the gold standard now," began a reporter.

"That's not right," interrupted Ballantine sharply. "It's absolutely false to say we are off the gold standard. You wouldn't say we were off the currency standard, would you?"

"What about the security and commodity markets?"

"That's up to them," responded Mr. Woodin. "It would be hard for them to operate unless the banks are open."

"Now what about after Thursday?" a reporter suddenly asked Mr. Woodin.

"We are working hard on that," the secretary replied. "That's the problem we are hard at work on right now. We will solve it."

Other treasury officials later said that now that the banks were closed the government's main task was to get them open on a sound basis.

Mills Is Optimistic.

"I think it can be done," former Secretary Mills said.

Officials said that the treasury would be closed except insofar as the secretary decided to keep it open as new regulations were issued.

The capital presented a strange Sunday scene today as officials, bankers and congressmen hurried to and from the White House and the treasury during the fifteen hours prior to the issuance of the White House proclamation. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia bankers began gathering at the treasury at 10 o'clock. More than a score of bankers, officials and congressmen attended the morning and early afternoon conferences at which the moratorium plan was worked out for presentation to the President.

The new cabinet, many of whose members had not as yet become familiar enough with their new jobs to know their way around their new offices, met in emergency session at 2:30. It was at this conference that the moratorium plan was proposed.

Crowds Gather Outside.

While the cabinet was in session a crowd of several hundred inauguration visitors gathered outside the north portico of the White House watching the comings and goings of the big wigs of the new Democratic régime.

Meeting with the cabinet were Vice President John N. Garner and Rep. Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, who will be the speaker of the house. Later, Rep. Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader of the house, was summoned and asked if he could have the Republican members on hand as early as Thursday. He replied that he could.

There was further discusion with Senator Hiram Johnson of California, who entered the White House portals for the first time in four years, Senator Glass, Rep. Steagall, Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina and Lewis Douglas of Arizona, who is to be director of the budget, and Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the senate.

Roosevelt Issues Statements.

The upshot was a decision to summon congress on Thursday, whereupon Mr. Roosevelt authorized the following statement:

"The President announced this afternoon that he has issued a call for a special session of congress to convene on Thursday, March 9, at 12 o'clock noon."

Half an hour later, the official call, signed by the President and attested by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, was issued. It declared that "public interests require that the congress of the United States should be convened in extra session." In another place it was stated that "an extraordinary occasion" requires the session.

In response to inquiries regarding the program the President will lay before congress Mr. Roosevelt later issued this statement:

"In anticipation of the meeting of congress on Thursday I am preparing immediately a program directed to meet the present monetary emergency. It is of course essential that the first business before the congress will be the present banking and financial situation."

Bank Emergency First.

The understanding is that the message the President will transmit to the new congress will be confined to emergency measures dealing with the bank panic. Submission of his more extended program for alleviating the depression and returning the government to first principles will be reserved for a later occasion.

The financial situation looms large on the agenda of the conference the President is to have tomorrow forenoon with the governors of states who attended the inauguration. There were more than 30 governors here yesterday, but some of them have been called home by the banking crisis.

Approximately $800,000,000 of paper money and $30,000,000 in gold coins have been moved out of the treasury department here during the last two weeks to meet banking demand throughout the country.

Presses of the bureau of engraving, source of all paper money, were grinding steadily all day today in disregard of the usual holiday in order to meet still more demands. The bureau has operated night and day shifts for some time.

Most of the new money shipped out of Washington has been federal reserve notes. Stocks of this type of money outside the treasury have increased by about $726,400,000 during the last two weeks, jumping to a total of $3,859,600,000.

Reserve notes are the most elastic unit in the currency system, and during February, which witnessed a billion dollar increase in circulation, reserve notes met 79 per cent of the new demands. They must be secured by at least 40 per cent gold and not more than 60 per cent commercial paper and government securities. Actually, they have a 61 per cent gold backing at present. Another 2 billion dollars in this type of money can still be issued.

Bank Notes Increase.

Approximately $15,000,000 worth of national banks notes have been sent out during the last two weeks. They now are the second largest type of paper money and are secured 100 per cent by certain government bonds which national banks place in the hands of the treasurer of the United States.

Treasury statement shows a $50,000,000 decline in the treasury's holdings of gold coin during the last two weeks. At the same time the total gold certificates outstanding have declined by about $31,000,000. Although officials refused to explain, the similarity of these two declines was taken to indicate a movement to convert the paper gold certificates into actual gold.

On March 15, the treasury has to refinance 894 million dollars' worth of maturing securities and in addition borrow sufficient new funds to cover the mounting deficit and provide for relief. Banks are the usual market for government securities, but even a popular drive like the Liberty loan campaign would not work with the banks closed.

Will Slow Tax Collections.

Banking holidays will embarrass the government financially, not only by practical blocking borrowing, but also by slowing up tax collections. On March 15 the first of the new high income taxes come due. Although taxpayers have been instructed to send in their checks regardless of restrictions, the government will have difficulty collecting on them.

The treasury had only about 204 million dollars in cash on hand on March 1, official reports show, and either income taxes or borrowing must augment this sum so that the running expenses as well as the relief outlays of the government may be met. During February the treasury's cash balance was drawn down as much as 100 million dollars in two weeks.

Outstanding against the 204 million cash balance of the treasury are large relief credits set up through loans to the various states which the Reconstruction Finance corporation meets by calling on the treasury for funds. In addition a public debt interest payment falls due on March 15, and running expenses must be met.

Even prompt opening of banks will not completely solve the treasury's financial problems, it was said. Reserves of banks, into which they dip for cash to buy the treasury issues, have been so depleted that they might not be able to absorb the necessary treasury borrowings.

May Start Selling Drive.

Excess reserves of New York member banks in the federal reserve system amounted to only $12,000,000 on March 1, and even if this whole sum were loaned to the treasury, it would be sufficient for only about two days' expenditures. In the past New York banks have carried a large share of the government's securities, but the duty will shift to other centers, notably Chicago, if the routine manner of financing is maintained.

A popular security selling drive, like the Liberty loan campaigns, or a selling of government securities directly to the federal reserve banks with all the attendant dangers of inflation are the only alternatives open to the treasury. A popular campaign would work only if the banks were open so that people could draw their money.

Selling of government securities directly to federal reserve banks would be like the post-war inflation in Europe in which central banks financed the governments. Inflation would come about by the banks buying the securities, then using them for collateral with which to obtain more federal reserve notes with which they would buy still more government securities, thus putting in motion an endless stream of new money.

KING OF BRITAIN IS ATTACKED BY COLD; KEPT INSIDE

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, March 5.—King George was kept indoors today by a slight cold, but his indisposition was stated to be so slight that "there is no question of issuing bulletins."

As a "precautionary measure" it was decided the king ought to stay in Buckingham palace and abandon the visit he intended to pay today to the Royal academy's commemorative exhibition. Queen Mary went without him. It is believed the king will be able to attend the levee in St. James's palace, which will be held with all the usual pageantry Tuesday.

King Carol Also Ill.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 5.—(AP)—King Carol is suffering from a severe cold accompanied by a cough. His physicians said the cold was not dangerous but advised the king to remain in bed the next few days.

CHECKS WITH BANKS' GUARANTEE PROPOSED AS CASH SUBSTITUTE

John K. Byrne, president of the Jonkay Research and Forecast corporation, room 1170, Board of Trade building, put out yesterday the following suggestion for use during the bank moratorium:

"To prevent a vast and unnecessary shrinkage in volume of business during the moratorium, we suggest that individuals and corporations issue checks in payment for goods and services, made payable to currency instead of to a specific name. Instead of certifying such checks, which the moratorium obviously makes impossible, the banks on which they are drawn can indorse them with a guarantee that the amount is on deposit to the credit of the maker.

"When this guarantee is indorsed on checks, the amount of the check will be debited against the account of the maker, just as though he had withdrawn that amount of currency and will be set aside to meet payment of the check when the moratorium is ended.

"The maker then issues this check, guaranteed as to deposit of funds, to his grocer in payment for food. The grocer issues it to his clerk in payment for salaries, the clerk issues it to his landlord in payment for rent, etc.

"Nobody else indorses it and the check passes from hand to hand. It literally serves as currency until the panic is over and the banks are reopened.

"The person or firm who then possesses the check will then exchange it for cash at the bank on which it is drawn, or deposit it to the credit of his own account in his own bank."

CLEARING HOUSE SCRIP AIDS CITY IN PANIC OF 1907

Recall Successful Operation of Certificates.

Issuance of clearing house certificates in Chicago during the money panic of 1907 was recalled yesterday by many Chicagoans, as banking authorities considered adoption of the system which operated satisfactorily a quarter of a century ago.

The currency famine forced Chicago banks to halt deposit withdrawals in the middle of October of 1907 and there was a demand for the establishment for some medium of exchange to replace legal tender. At the same time citizens besieged President Theodore Roosevelt to call a special session of congress. Bankers begged for a revision of the currency laws. Various forms of scrip were advocated.

Plea for Certificates.

On Nov. 4 the late John R. Thompson, then county treasurer, and the late James B. Forgan, president of the First National bank, joined in a plea for clearing house certificates. Two days later officials of the clearing house announced they would adopt the proposal if the movement developed sufficient impetus.

Business leaders announced they would accept the certificates. Labor unions and other workers joined in the demand. For a time agitation ceased when $3,500,000 in gold was brought to the First National bank from London. It was carried across the ocean on the Lusitania which was sunk by a torpedo ten years later in one of the greatest marine tragedies of the war.

Only Temporary Relief.

This offered only temporary relief and the cry for certificates was resumed. On Nov. 13 the first certificates [about $200,000 worth] were released. Within three days there was more than $6,000,000 of the checks in circulation.

The certificates were issued in $1, $2, $5 and $10 denominations, each denomination on paper of a distinctive color. In appearance they resembled checks. They were drawn on banks and large depositors. Stocks and bonds of a total value of one-third more than the amount of the certificates in circulation were deposited as collateral for the checks.

The certificates were readily accepted throughout the city and many of them found they way back to the banks in savings deposits.

Spreads to Other Cities.

Soon the plan spread to other cities where it also proved successful.

Within two weeks Banker Forgan initiated a movement to resume currency payments. After conferring with banks in the midwest the certificates were quietly withdrawn from circulation. By the middle of December, at the expiration of the period of notice, banks had returned to currency payment. With resumption of currency payments deposits and withdrawals resumed almost a normal course and the great panic of 1907 became history.

D. F. Kelly, president of The Fair store, who was one of the organizers of the plan to issue the clearing house certificates in 1907, recalled those times last night.

"The clearing house certificates worked," said Mr. Kelly. "They turned out to be very practical."

Digs Up Scrip Note Dated 1820; It's Still Good Money

EDMONTON, Alta., March 5.—(AP)—Proving the "scrip" idea now being used in many American cities is an old one, an Edmonton man today showed a Hudson's Bay company scrip note signed at London, May 4, 1820. Although more than 100 years old, the note can be cashed today for its face value of one pound.

TEXT OF ROOSEVELT PROCLAMATION FOR CONGRESS SESSION

Washington, March 5.—(AP)—The text of the proclamation issued by President Roosevelt today summoning congress to meet in extra session on Thursday, March 9, follows:

"Whereas, public interests require that the congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock, noon, on the ninth day of March, 1933, to receive such communication as may be made by the executive:

"Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the capitol in the city of Washington on the ninth day of March, 1933, at 12 o'clock, noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

"Done at the city of Washington this fifth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-seventh.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

SEE MORATORIUM DRIVING HOARDED MONEY INTO USE

Tax Eater to Be Curbed, Says Levinson.

The present financial distress growing out of the bank moratorium is not without its compensating benefits, the most immediate of which will probably be the return to circulation of a large part of the hoarded money, withdrawal of which brought about the moratorium.

The above view was expressed yesterday by Salmon O. Levinson, prominent Chicago attorney and student of international affairs, and by Prof. Harry G. Guthmann in the department of finance in Northwestern university's college of commerce.

Taxeaters vs. Taxpayers.

"It took some severe financial calamity," said Mr. Levinson, "to stop the economic civil wars which have been raging in our country—the taxeaters against the taxpayers; the bonus grabbers against all the people. These present events should abolish the taxeaters' idea that the people's money is nobody's money.

"The present situation is a notice to Europe that hereafter the United States must look out for No. 1. No longer may we permit Europeans to dump stocks on our exchanges and withdraw our gold.

War Debt Settlement.

"There may be a settlement of the war debts, but if there is, we must dictate the terms, as we have a right to do after spending forty billions of dollars in war costs and loans to Europe."

The present bank moratorium will immediately force back into circulation the smaller funds of money which hoarders have accumulated, Prof. Guthmann pointed out. It may take some time, he believes, to put back into circulation the larger hoards.

Soldier Shoots and Kills Partner on Hunting Party

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GATUN, Canal Zone, March 5.—Cicero G. Sumrall, for 20 years with the Panama canal service, was accidentally shot and killed by Private Richard Heishman of Fort Randolph last night. Accompanied by Capt. G. M. O'Connel, also of Fort Randolph, the three were on a "jack light" hunt. While in the heart of the jungle flashing lights to catch the gleaming eyes of some quarry, Heishman separated from the others and thought he saw an animal. He fired. The bullet struck Sumrall, who leaves a wife and four daughters.

MERCHANTS PLAN FOR 'BUSINESS AS USUAL' TODAY

Public Carriers Report Normal Patronage.

Facing the first full business day under conditions imposed by the bank moratorium, Chicago business leaders yesterday expressed confidence and hope that normal trade conditions would prevail today and tomorrow.

This confidence was strengthened by reports from street car and motor bus companies and from the stores and theaters that were open yesterday. Many of the latter establishments reported that dozens of customers had tendered gold pieces and bills of the old style currency, most of them in large denominations, during the day. This was considered definite evidence that hoarded money is being forced into circulation. Sunday business of the two large public carriers was normal.

Accept $20 Gold Pieces.

In one loop restaurant two $20 gold pieces and twenty of the old style large bills of $10 and $20 denominations were received from patrons. Two five dollar gold pieces were reported received in trade at a Wabash avenue cigar store. More than a dozen old style $10 and $20 bills were tendered in one loop cigar store.

The motion picture theaters reported a normal week-end business. One loop theater reported a sell-out on Saturday night.

In anticipation of an added demand for change the street car company had provided conductors yesterday with more than the usual amount of pennies and nickels. The expected demand, however, failed to materialize. The company, which requires about $4,000 in pennies a day for change, has enough of these coins to last several days.

The large loop department stores, most of which announced Saturday that they would accept pay roll checks of sound concerns for merchandise and would give change in merchandise certificates, yesterday reaffirmed their intention of following this policy.

D. F. Kelly of The Fair was in an optimistic mood. "I believe," he said, "that the general public has decided to view the lack of banking facilities as a purely temporary situation and that the natural feeling of apprehension following the establishment of the moratorium has subsided.

"We are prepared to handle the credit situation in such a way that none of our customers will find it impossible to do business with us solely because of conditions imposed by the bank holiday.

"Attitude of All."

"I believe that is the attitude of all the big merchandising concerns and I have yet to find a Chicago business leader who has expressed a despondent view of the present situation. I recall the similar condition which prevailed in 1907. There was some confusion at first and some credit difficulty, but within a few days everything had been straightened out."

Fire insurance companies doing business in Chicago were expected to take action today on the proposal of Charles F. Thomas, manager of the Western Underwriters' association, to defer payment on policy losses for the full period of delay provided for in the contracts. It was also considered likely that the fire and life insurance companies would announce a plan for the acceptance of policy premiums, a problem caused by the bank moratorium which required immediate consideration by the underwriters.

Gas Stations on Cash Basis.

Gasoline filling stations of the Standard Oil company and other large concerns operating chains of service stations reported that hundreds of customers had tried to obtain cash on checks yesterday. The business of the stations, however, was conducted on a strictly cash basis.

Officials of two large food concerns, the National Tea company and the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, who on Saturday decided to continue to do business as usual on a cash basis, said yesterday that reports from their stores at the close of business today would determine whether an emergency credit policy would be considered advisable.

In case of the National Tea company a system of selling certificates and accepting them in payment for food has been in effect for the last three years. The certificates are sold to concerns which give them to employes instead of cash.

CHURCH OFFERINGS HOLIDAY DECLARED BY N. Y. MINISTER

New York, March 5.—[Special.]—A moratorium on church offerings was declared today during the bank holiday by the Rev. C. Everett Wagner, minister of the Union Methodist Episcopal church.

"Until this financial crisis is over, we urge that you conserve every cent that you have for food," the Rev. Mr. Wagner told his congregation.

Members of the Free synagogue, meeting in Carnegie hall, were requested by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise to contribute by check to the offering if they had no cash. Only a few checks appeared in the collection, which otherwise was about normal.

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Broadway Temple Methodist Episcopal church, informed members of his congregation they could drop I. O. U.'s in the plate if they lacked currency.

ITALIAN PAPERS SEE ROOSEVELT IN DUCE'S ROLE

ROME, March 5.—(AP)—The inaugural speech of President Roosevelt brought a decidedly favorable reaction in the Italian press, in line with the Fascist view that a centralization of authority in one man, even though of limited extent, is a step in the right way to get quick, effective action.

Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, said the bank moratorium in New York contributed perhaps more than any other factor in convincing even the most reluctant of the urgent necessity for the whole nation to rally around Mr. Roosevelt.

La Stampa of Turin saw Mr. Roosevelt following in the footsteps of Il Duce.

"Mr. Roosevelt is following the great principles established by the Fascist revolution and the genius of Il Duce," the newspaper said. "A just pride in the spirit and the trailblazing work of Fascism prompts us to point this out. The situation recalls the Mussolinian phrase, 'Where we have shown the way, others will follow.'"

HITLER TIGHTENS GRIP ON GERMAN RULE AT POLLS

Nazis and Nationalists Win Majority.

BERLIN, March 6.—[Monday.]—(AP)—Seventeen million voters out of 39,000,000 manifested their confidence in Chancellor Adolf Hitler in yesterday's reichstag election and demonstrated to President Paul von Hindenburg that he sensed the desires of the German people rightly when he asked the chief of the Nazi Brown Shirts to take the helm of the ship of state.

Germany now is well on the way to Fascist dictatorship. Chancellor Hitler, by the vote of the people, has been given the legal tools to annihilate the last vestiges of the democracy which he considers a failure.

The Nazis alone will command nearly 44 per cent of the votes in the new reichstag and can dictate to their Nationalist co-workers in the government what must be done to shape a new Germany in accordance with Nazi ideals.

20,000,000 Back Cabinet.

The cabinet assembled after midnight to adopt an "appeal to the German people," and Hitler expressed himself as unusually well pleased with the outcome. He said that an indorsement of a cabinet of national concentration by more than 20,000,000 voters—that is the ballot totals of the National Socialists and the Nationalists—was an unheard of thing.

So far as could be learned, the chancellor will stick to the Nazi contention that the communists must not take their seats in the reichstag, and this means that the government would have an almost two thirds majority to change the constitution and the Nazis would have a regular majority without aid from any other party.

In Prussia, which elected a state diet yesterday, the Nazi victory was equally sweeping. Thus in both the reich and in its largest state no popular election may be expected for a long time to come.

Hitler's Nazis and their Nationalist allies polled 51.7 per cent of the votes cast yesterday.

Tabulation of Votes.

		Per cent.
National Socialists	17,264,000	43.7
Nationalists	3,131,000	8.0
People's Party	432,000	1.1
Christian Socialists	382,000	1.0
Catholic Centrists	4,289,000	11.0
Bavarian People's Party	1,206,000	3.1
State Party	335,000	.9
Socialists	7,176,000	18.2
Communists	4,746,000	12.2
Scattered	329,000	.8

The Wolff News agency estimated that the new reichstag will reach record size, with 640 to 650 seats. The size of the legislature is flexible, in general a seat being allotted on the basis of each 60,000 votes obtained by each party.

Makeup of Reichstag.

The Wolff agency predicted the following allotments:

	New.	Old.
National Socialists	288	196
Nationalists	52	51
People's Party	4	5
Centrists	71	69
Bavarian People's Party	20	19
State Party	6	2
Socialists	120	121
Communists	79	100

The burning of the reichstag building last week—blamed by the government on the communists—helped the Nazis not only in smashing the communists but also in making the bourgeoisie rally to their banner in response to arguments that Chancellor Hitler's Fascists constituted the safest bulwark against bolshevism.

Hitler, for the first time heading the list of his party's candidates for the reichstag, won his seat in the legislature easily.

In general the election was carried on peacefully, although there were sporadic brawls in which four persons were killed and several injured.

One of the dramatic events of the day was an order by Dr. Wilhelm Frick, the Nazi minister of interior, dismissing the Socialist lord mayor of Hamburg to make way for a Nazi. After the order had been given hundreds of Nazis took possession of the Hamburg city hall, singing national and Nazi songs. Shortly after midnight Nazi storm troopers occupied the city hall at Altona.

Socialist Mayors Deposed.

The government of Thuringia deposed all Socialist mayors, who are to be replaced with Hitlerites, and at the same time prohibited the entire Socialist press in the state, which will not be permitted to publish until March 20.

As the last few ballots were counted it was shown that the Nazis sliced huge blocks of voters not only from the parties of the left but even from their allied Nationalists. Previously strong Nazi localities in many cases doubled the party vote in the last election. Hamburg, a stronghold of the left parties, swept the Nazis into the lead, the Hitlerite showing of 318,000 there being an increase of 111,000 over November.

The Nazis made heavy inroads on Baden, hitherto an anti-Fascist state, and also gained considerably in Bavaria and Wuerttemberg. Among the cities showing startling Nazi advances are Koenigsburg, Chemnitz, Duesseldorf, Cologne, and Dresden.

The vote for the Prussian diet was 24,008,000.

The Wolff News agency said the total number of seats in the diet would run from 465 to 470 and that the Nazis would have 207, the Nationalists 43, the Centrists 67, the State Party 3, the Socialists 79, and the Communists 63.

Although Berlin was outwardly quiet throughout the voting hours, there was considerable tenseness here. This was indicated in a measure by a widespread rumor to the effect that President Von Hindenburg had spent the afternoon with troops of the reichswehr [the regular army] at Doeberitz, outside Berlin, and that Gen. Werner von Blomberg, the minister of defense and head of the reichswehr, had taken a special oath. These rumors were officially denied.

A communique said that President Von Hindenburg had not left the palace since voting in the forenoon but, on the contrary, had received Col. Theodore Duesterberg to thank the Steel Helmet organization for an afternoon parade in his honor. Col. Duesterberg is head of the Steel Helmet Association of War Veterans.

Raid Jewish Organization.

It was learned that district headquarters of the Central Union of Jewish Citizens at Dortmund, Essen and Erfurt were raided by Nazi auxiliary police Saturday night. National headquarters of this union, which has the reputation of a conservative, patriotic organization, was considerably alarmed by these raids as Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, cabinet minister without portfolio, after last Wednesday's raid on the union's quarters in Berlin, personally requested the chief officers of the group to come to him. He apologized to them and assured them he disapproved of such action.

At Weimar the Thuringian government dissolved the central organization of German citizens of Jewish belief on the ground that the action was necessary to preserve "the quiet and safety of the German nation." The Thuringian government, which is staunchly Nazi, also seized and prohibited various pamphlets of this organization. The association itself was placed under formal ban.

CUTTING ANOTHER CLUB INSTEAD OF UNLOADING

'MISS PERKINS' OR 'MME. SECRETARY,' TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Washington, D. C., March 5.—[Special.]—The first woman in the cabinet will continue to sign the pay roll as Frances Perkins, and be addressed as Miss Perkins by those who deal with her officially here, as in Albany or New York, but here she may also, if desired, be addressed as "Mme. Secretary." In private life she is Mrs. Paul Wilson.

That form of salutation she prefers to either "Miss" or "Mrs. Secretary," which were tried tentatively in some confusion by a guest at the White House reception yesterday, who after greeting her with enthusiastic congratulations as "Miss Perkins" stumbled a bit over her new title.

"O, no, neither I think," Miss Perkins laughed. "Why not, 'Mme. Secretary,' if that form is to be used at all? One is accustomed to 'Mme. Chairman' or 'Mme. President,' so it comes more naturally, don't you think?"

HITLER'S NAZIS CELEBRATE 'DAY OF AWAKENING'

Throng the Streets and Sing 'Battle Hymns.'

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 5.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Nazis tonight are celebrating the "day of national awakening" as a result of the chancellor's election triumph.

Bands played and enthusiastic followers of Hitler swept through the streets singing Nazi battle hymns. Only Hitlerite music was played over the government controlled radio system. The program included a special Hitler march composed by Dr. Ernest Hanfstaengel, a Nazi lieutenant and a former Harvard man whose brother was well known in Chicago society before the world war.

Calls Result a Revolution.

"This election has completely destroyed Marxism," Walther Funk, the chancellor's press chief, said. "It is the colossal victory for the national forces of the land toward which we have striven for years."

"The election is a national revolution," said a cryptic statement issued by the foreign office.

Officials are particularly jubilant over the smashing defeat of the communists, whose vote was 40 per cent less than at the last election, and over the "annihilation" of the small parties like the Christian Socialists and the peasants' State party.

While residents of Berlin were going to the polls this afternoon 24,000 Steel Helmet war veterans paraded in honor of President Paul von Hindenburg, but the demonstration turned into a giant ovation for the Hohenzollern princes. The crowds recognized Prince Oscar, Prince Eitel Friedrich, and Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm's eldest son, Prince Wilhelm, a prospective claimant to the throne, in the ranks of the field gray marchers and greeted them enthusiastically.

Salute Von Hindenburg.

The marchers first passed in review before Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Nazi minister without portfolio and commissioner for the Prussian ministry of interior, in Unter den Linden and then swung over to the Wilhelmstrasse to salute the president.

The only flags visible in Berlin were Hitlerite swastika emblems, abounding in the middle class quarters, and imperial colors, showing in the richer districts. Labor districts were devoid of flags. The red flag of the communists was forbidden and the republican colors are the object of strong attacks from the present holders of power.

Von Hindenburg went to the polls early this morning. He was greeted by crowds which waited for him for hours. Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, Nationalist minister of economics and agriculture in Chancellor Hitler's cabinet, postponed his voting until noon and was forced to stand in line because the polling place was overcrowded.

Theater Manager Robbed of $297 by Two Bandits

John Mitchell, manager of the Patio theater, 6008 Irving Park boulevard, was robbed of $297 last night by two bandits who accosted him in the hallway of the building at 4016 North Austin avenue, where he lives. The theater is in the same building. Both bandits had revolvers.

MORATORIUM DRIVES RARE 1804 DOLLAR BACK IN CIRCULATION

Rare coins which have been hoarded as curios for generations are evidently being returned into circulation because of the moratorium, it was discovered last night.

An instance occurred in the restaurant of the Graymont hotel, 1032 East 46th street. A family of three dined and the man, according to the recollection of the cashier, handed over a silver dollar dated 1804 and a half dollar dated 1834, in payment of the dinner.

The cashier said she noted the dates and intended to keep the coins, but inadvertantly passed out the 1804 dollar in change later. According to James R. Lucas, manager of the restaurant, who is a coin collector, the 1804 dollar is exceedingly rare and valuable.

Property Damaged Over Wide Area; Several Hurt.

Fire Attorney Thomas J. Sheehan last night was investigating the terrific explosion which early yesterday demolished the one story brick building at 2543-45 Lawrence avenue, breaking hundreds of windows over a radius of half a mile, and slightly injuring several persons. The blast was heard as far as Niles Center and brought thousands of persons to the scene.

Two rug cleaning concerns—Abdisho Brothers at 2545 Lawrence avenue and Eshue Brothers at 2543 Lawrence avenue—occupied the structure. Eshue K. Howell, partner in one of the firms, and John Abdisho of the other, told Fire Attorney Sheehan that they used neither gasoline nor naphtha in their plants. They also said they had no labor troubles, eliminating the possibility of a bomb being responsible for the explosion. Their statements and those of firemen indicated, Attorney Sheehan said, that a leaking gas pipe was the cause.

Blast Damages Wide Area.

The building where the explosion occurred was valued at $15,000 and was a total loss. Damage in other buildings where walls were weakened and glass shattered was estimated high into the thousands. The damaged area extended eastward to the intersection of Lincoln, Lawrence and Western avenues, and westward well beyond the north branch of the Chicago river which crosses Lawrence avenue in the 2900 block.

Battalion Fire Chief Frank Oswald, who lives at 4729 North Washtenaw avenue, near the scene of the explosion, was aroused from his bed by the blast. He dressed and ran to the building, but found no one in danger. The ruins of the building were then in flames.

Wrecks Nearby Building.

Across the street, at No. 2542 Lawrence avenue, is a dog and cat hospital operated by Dr. Leo T. Kilfoy, veterinarian. The front bedroom window sash was blown through the room and across the bed in which Dr. Kilfoy and his wife were sleeping. A wall of this building was split by the explosion which also stripped off the roof covering.

Only one of the Kilfoys' six children, Edward, 11 years old, was cut by the shower of glass. J. A. Kilfoy, brother of the veterinarian, who was sleeping in back of the hospital, was slightly injured. Many of the dogs and cats jumped through broken windows and their howls added to the general confusion.

Mrs. Sue Gilberts, 4756 Maplewood avenue, who is blind, was confused and terrified by the blast and getting out of bed walked on broken glass in her bare feet. In the same building V. A. Krutcher and W. D. Stapleton reported that the glass in the bedroom window was blown in and passed over their heads and lodged in the wall at the head of the bed.

9 MEN, 2 WOMEN HELD AS BANDITS; SHOOTING SOLVED

Nine men and two women were held at Warren avenue station last night as members of a bandit gang which committed nearly fifty robberies. Lieut. Charles Egan said that the confession of one of the prisoners, Mario Bolsomo, 18 years old, of 1409 Spruce street, solved the shooting on Feb. 25 of John P. Gregg, owner, and Joseph Merick, clerk, of the drug store at 6859 South Western avenue.

Gregg is near death at Holy Cross hospital from a bullet in the spine, received in resisting robbery. Bolsomo, Lieut. Egan said, named George Karamagnis, 17 years old, of 1734 Maypole avenue, as the youth who fired the shots. Karamagnis is now at Mother Cabrini hospital, a bullet victim.

FIGHTING GROWS IN CUBA; TROOPS SHOOT REBELS

Revolt Reported in 3 Provinces.

BY GUSTAV RENO.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, March 5.—Private advices tonight report that the three eastern provinces, Santa Clara, Camaguey, and Oriente, are in rebellion. The government insists there is no official news.

Communication is cut off beyond Matanzas, next province east of Havana. Havana military censorship is enforced and the department of the interior has ordered the closing of all newspapers in the eastern provinces to prevent publication of news "harmful to government interests."

Guerrilla Warfare Spreads.

However, reports from private sources and from refugees arriving in Havana tell of intermittent guerrilla warfare which is spreading towards Matanzas, Havana, and Pinar Del Rio provinces. An unconfirmed report repeats the tale of the Menocal crowd that they have landed a rebel expedition near Guantanamo, Oriente province.

At Moron troops today killed 18 rebels who were conducting a reign of terror and incendiarism through Camaguey cane fields and sugar mills. Thousands of tons of cane have been burned.

Groups of rebels have lain in ambush along the Central of Cuba railway sniping at passenger and freight trains. Executives of this railroad and the United Railways of Havana tonight filed a petition here threatening to discontinue service unless the government provides immediate protection.

Bridges Blown Up.

Three railroad bridges have been blown up—at Camajuani, Placetas, and Esperanza—and telegraph lines have been severed.

Havana police today raided three alleged revolutionary centers, confiscating maps, plans, and photographs of sugar mills, government buildings, executive residences, bridges, and railways. Chief of Police Anciart reported the confiscation of 800 pounds of dynamite, scores of fuses and bombs, 85 machine guns, 400 rifles, army tents, uniforms and insignia, and considerable seditious literature.

Twenty-six unnamed leaders were jailed "at the disposal of the president." Among them are six engineers and professors of the national university, who are accused of drafting the maps, two chemists and five architects. The other prisoners are business men and students.

Signer of Constitution for Cuba Dies in Poverty

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, March 5.—Former Senator Juan Gualberto Gomez, colored, one of the last three survivors of those signing the 1901 Cuban constitution, died today. He was 65. Once rated as a millionaire, Gomez died in poverty.

ROBS THEATER IN LOOP.

A shabbily dressed bandit took $30 yesterday at McVicker's theater, 25 West Madison street. He compelled Miss Florence Wubben, 5616 North Artesian avenue, the cashier, to hand over the money. She fainted after the robbery.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, March 5. A riot flared today in the village of Drumsna in County Leitrim when an attempt was made to hold a meeting protesting against the Free State order for the deportation of James Gralton, a native of the district who now is an American citizen. Gralton was ordered to leave the Free State by March 4 but disappeared some days ago.

When Peadr O'Donnell of Dublin, Republican leader and author, attempted to address the people of Drumsna after mass today he was pelted with mud and stones and obliged to abandon the meeting. Police and local priests had to intervene so O'Donnell could get away.

Later a second attempt was made to hold a meeting in Drumsna but O'Donnell and other speakers were driven away by a hostile crowd and the speakers' automobile was stoned.

FAITH!

New York, March 6.—(Special.)—Faith in the ability of President Roosevelt to meet the problems of the present economic situation is expressed by Jesse Isidor Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., in an advertisement published this morning.

Mr. Straus set down a code which he, as a citizen, is following. It follows:

I trust my government.
I trust our banks.
I do not expect the impossible.
I shall do nothing hysterical. I shall act as nearly as I can to normal. If it is normal to carry little cash in my pocket when there is plenty to go around, I shall carry little now. There never was a time when every one on earth could possess all his cash in his pockets, his socks, his safe deposit box, or anywhere else.
I know that if I try now to get all my cash, I will certainly make matters worse.
I will not stampede. I will not lose nerve. I will keep my head.
Every day, every hour, can make a turn for the better. This day can be the turning point of our country's future. It is up to every citizen.

The Fair thoroughly indorses that declaration of faith and reproduces it here confident that it is an expression of the feeling of every citizen of Chicago.

batches containing the President's proclamation shortly after 10 o'clock last night. Most of them expressed the opinion that fuller instructions would have to come from Washington before the situation would be properly clarified.

Much interest was manifested in that part of the proclamation which authorized the secretary of the treasury to permit banks to resume normal operations. One attorney-banker pointed out that this part of the President's order was merely permissive, however, and that definite instructions would have to come from the secretary of the treasury before action could be taken.

Authorization for the secretary of the treasury to permit banks to accept new deposits provided such banks either deposit this money with a federal reserve bank or invest it in United States government bonds raises the possibility that hoarded money may be drawn out of hiding to buy—indirectly—United States government bonds and thus help the treasury in its heavy refinancing during the next few weeks. On March 15 the treasury has 600 million dollars worth of financing to do.

"This proclamation moves us ahead a few notches, but it doesn't, in itself, solve the banking troubles or tell us what the program will be. It seems to be simply the vehicle by which the authority to carry out a program is assumed by the President for himself and his secretary of the treasury.

Foundation Is Built.

"It is what comes later that will be most important. The foundation has now been built. It remains to see what the President and the incoming congress will build upon it. Until we know what this will be it is impossible to act toward clearing up the local situation. We have the utmost faith in the President and look forward with great confidence.

"As for clearing house certificates, we won't have any in circulation while the banks are closed, anyway. If we issue such certificates it will be after Thursday."

Another said that the President's proclamation had cleared up one important point. It seems to give a national basis to clearing house certificates, so that one part of the country can't be drained of federal reserve currency at the expense of other parts.

Without this, he said, if Chicago banks should issue clearing house certificates out of town accounts might take all the federal reserve currency and leave only clearing house certificates for local customers.

Asked if checks written on Illinois banks, but not cleared before March 3, would be cashed when the banks reopen, one banking authority said:

"There has been some disagreement on this point, but it is my opinion that such checks would be considered dead and should be returned to the maker to make out new checks or some other settlement."

The federal reserve's currency annex in the National Bank of the Republic building will enable merchants to make change. Small change has been scarce all over Chicago since Friday night. Much hoarded money has been coming out to be spent. It developed, however, that most hoarders had put away bills of large or fairly large denominations. Nickels, dimes and dollar bills have been so scarce that many merchants have lost sales because of the inability to make change.

Demands of Business.

"In order to meet the reasonable needs of business for currency and coin of small denominations," the federal reserve bank's statement said last night, "the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago has arranged for the opening of a currency exchange on Monday morning to be conducted at 126 South La Salle street.

"This exchange will enable the public and the various business institutions in the community to obtain such small currency and coin as they may require.

"No checks, drafts, or orders for the payment of money will be cashed at this exchange. The operation of this exchange is intended to supply the temporary need for such as service."

The safe deposit vaults of banks throughout the city will be open for access to safe deposit boxes, according to clearing house officers.

The postal savings' office here, although it keeps some of its balance with Chicago banks, has "substantial supplies of cash to meet withdrawal demands," according to an official.

Plenty of Cash.

"Our deposits now are in the neighborhood of $80,000,000," he said. "We can pay much of it out. If we run out of cash we will ask Washington for further instructions. Postal savings deposits are amply secured and there is no danger of loss."

Security exchanges will remain closed today as on Saturday.

Officials of the Chicago Board of Trade, which will be closed today except for cash transactions, held a special meeting yesterday at which the following statement was issued:

"Further efforts on the part of officers and directors of the Chicago Board of Trade to resume normal activities of the market and thereby facilitate the movement of foodstuffs throughout the country were made at a special meeting of the directors today.

"Earlier in the day, a meeting was held with Gov. Horner and later representatives of the principal loop banks met informally with the directors for a discussion of plans for expediting the resumption of normal marketing machinery."

It was pointed out that with the Chicago Board of Trade closed, with the exception of the cash grain market, there is now no way by which prices can be set for wheat, corn and other major agricultural products. This, in effect, practically puts a stop to the free movement of grains, flour and other commodities except where buyers can induce sellers to do business on the basis of a price to be determined later.

The Chicago Live Stock exchange is functioning on a plan whereby buyers will pay when the banks reopen.

New York Officials Rush Plans for Issuing Scrip

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 5.—The second day of New York's bank holiday closed with officials rushing plans to issue clearing house scrip. After news was received of President Roosevelt's proclamation extending the banking holiday, placing an embargo on gold, and giving permission for the issuance of clearing house scrip.

Leading New York bankers received the President's proclamation with indications of approval, and signified their belief that the use of clearing house certificates would prove just as successful in New York as in the 1907 panic.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman spent the day in his apartment consulting by telephone with President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Woodin in Washington and with officials and bankers here. The governor devoted most of his time to plans for the prevention of any interruption in the flow of food supplies into the city, and for providing funds to meet pay rolls.

All security and commodity exchanges will remain closed, barring unexpected changes in present plans, as long as the bank holiday lasts. The New York Stock exchange, which took the lead Saturday in the closing of the markets, did not limit its shutdown to any specific period but said that the trading would be suspended during the holiday. The other exchanges will be guided by its course, it is expected.

Works on Scrip Plans.

It was understood the state banking department was working out plans with the banks for certain exceptions to be made to the banking holiday so that pay rolls could be met, and so that places could be provided for making change. The state banking department also ruled that holders of safe deposit boxes should be permitted by the banks to have access to their property regardless of the holiday.

At headquarters of the New York Clearing House association, where leading banks conferred all afternoon, the news of the plan to issue clearing house certificates was officially confirmed. It was announced that the association had adopted the scrip plan formally, had authorized its officers to put it into effect "when, as, and if" needed, and had set up machinery for issuing the certificates.

The association also announced that the clearing house banks had organized a group under the Glass-Steagall amendment to the federal reserve act whereby the federal reserve requirments as to collateral are liberalized.

Bankers said the clearing house certificates probably would be ready Tuesday if they were needed then. The amount to be issued was not announced.

Bewildered, but still cheerful, the city followed its routine, talking of the possibility of using scrip instead of cash, but still patronizing the movie theaters, restaurants and concert halls.

Railroads reported, generally, that there had been no appreciable decrease in week-end travel, that there had been "no embarrassment" and that they were carrying on as usual, on an all cash basis.

A spokesman for the Pennsylvania reported that the outward movement today was good and an official of the New York Central reported everything going smoothly and sufficient cash on hand to meet all the road's needs for the present, including pay rolls.

One form of nuisance cropped up at Pennsylvania station. It started Saturday night when persons with banknotes of large denominations demanded change. There was a tremendous number of $100 notes, quite a few $500 notes and even a few $1,000 notes presented for change. One or two of the more timid persons tried to cover up their real purpose by buying Newark tickets.

Railroads Insist on Cash.

None of the railroads is accepting anything but cash for transportation. This is in accordance with general practice, an official pointed out, and up to today no change in that plan had been proposed.

Airplane lines and steamship lines, on the other hand, were accepting checks from old clients and were following a policy of being "reasonable" about accepting checks from other customers.

Increased sales were reported in most of the chain groceries in the poorest districts on Saturday, owners reported. Grocers believed it might have been caused by a desire to stock up before an inflation policy was decided upon by the government.

The Fifth Avenue Bus company has not taken up the question of scrip, its president, F. T. Wood, said.

"I presume, however, he added "that the transportation companies will coöperate in every way during the emergency."

Plans for Subway.

Thomas E. Murray Jr., one of the receivers of the Interboro Rapid Transit company promised "every possible coöperation with the banks and the public," but took the stand that the question of the use of scrip in the subways will probably not come up for at least four or five days.

Some of the restaurants in the mid town district were extending credit to known customers.

CITY VISITORS HUNT CASH FOR JOURNEYS HOME

Telegraph Offices Do a Rushing Business.

Many out of town guests of the loop hotels were reported embarrassed yesterday by the general shortage of cash. At the same time there was a rush at the American Express company and the two telegraph companies by persons requesting, sending and receiving cash by telegraphic money order.

The credit of the hotel guests was good for rooms, meals and services, but except in rare emergency cases the hotels were unable to furnish cash for those wishing to buy transportation home.

Hotel Business Falls Off.

Business of the hotels fell off considerably with the beginning of the bank holiday. Dozens of guests canceled reservations and postponed their trips until something is done about the money situation.

The Palmer house reported that its supply of cash was limited and was being conserved as much as possible. The same situation prevailed at the Sherman and the Congress. The Congress said Chicago residents holding credit cards issued by it would be extended credit during the holiday. The management of the Morrison was optimistic because of a large convention opening yesterday.

Limit Telegraph Money Orders.

The money order business was being carried on throughout the country under restrictions, it was said at Chicago offices. Postal Telegraph and Western Union were limiting money order transmittals to $100. Cash was available in all the larger cities to pay incoming orders, it was announced, but not in many of the smaller cities.

Neither of the telegraph companies could handle a $100 money order to Miami because the office there lacked the cash. This was due, it was believed, to the fact that many visitors there have wired for money.

The American Express company was limiting money orders to $200 and had cash on hand to pay out in the larger cities.

The transmitting companies last night were arranging to insure and send cash by regular airplane service to distant points.

POU DISPLACES REP. HAUGEN AS DEAN OF HOUSE

Washington, D. C., March 5.—(AP)—With the retirement of Representative Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, Representative Edward W. Pou of North Carolina is now dean of the house.

Haugen, author of many farm relief proposals when he was chairman of the agriculture committee under Republican control, today said he was "going back to Northwood, to help try to straighten things out."

The Iowan was elected from the Fourth Iowa district as a compromise candidate for the 56th congress and entered the house March 4, 1899. He was defeated in the Democratic landslide last November.

"I enjoyed my service of 34 years," Haugen said. "The Democrats taking over congress have a big job to do. I'm afraid they won't be able to do much to help, the job is so big."

Pou has represented the Fourth district of North Carolina since March 4, 1901. He came two years before John N. Garner, who yesterday became Vice President.

OFFER FINANCIAL PLANS FOR CURE OF NATION'S ILLS

Situation Is Surveyed by Group of Leaders.

A committee of capitalists and industrial leaders headed by Frank A. Vanderlip of New York yesterday gave out an interim report of its studies in which it recommended that the United States abandon the gold standard immediately and proposed other steps for meeting the nation's financial emergency. The recommendations were made, the report shows, in the belief that further efforts to liquidate America's debt load, public and private, through the medium of gold standard currency, would result in chaos.

The committee disclosed that its recommendations were first made on Feb. 26, but were not given to the public at that time because of the alarming nature of the situation.

The committee report recommended that the abandonment of the gold standard be accomplished through the suspension of specie payments [refusal of the treasury and banks to redeem paper money in gold] and an embargo on shipments of gold to foreign countries. It proposed that this action be followed after a brief "shaking down" interval by the institution of a currency based on the "compensated dollar." Such a currency would be based upon a gold dollar, but the amount of gold in the dollar would be raised or lowered as general commodity prices rise or fall.

Guarantee O. K. Reported.

Although its formal interim report does not mention the subject, it was reported in New York yesterday that the committee now favors a governmental guarantee of bank deposits.

Recommended in the report are two proposals, one immediate and the other for the near future, for reforming the banking system of the country. For immediate action in the crisis, the committee approves the plan, already being worked out in Michigan and New York, to separate the liquid and frozen assets of banks, give depositors full credit for that portion of their deposits represented by liquid assets and require them to wait for the liquidation of the frozen portion.

For the near future the report recommends what the committee terms the "department store" style of banking, and separation of banks into two distinct classes, commercial and investment institutions.

Besides Mr. Vanderlip members of the organization sponsoring the report, known as the "committee for the nation to rebuild prices and purchasing power," include Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, E. L. Cord, Vincent Bendix, George W. Borg, Max Epstein and R. E. Wood of Chicago, Arthur V. Davis, John Marcus Davis, Frederick H. Frazier and E. L. Norton of New York, J. H. Rand Jr. of Buffalo, N. Y., James F. Bell of Minneapolis, Lessing Rosenwald and C. A. Musselman of Philadelphia, and W. E. Weiss of Wheeling, W. Va. All of the members listed, except Mr. Vanderlip and Secretary Wallace, are active executives of large industrial corporations.

The committee, Mr. Vanderlip explained yesterday in New York, was organized last September, when a group of business men decided that nothing was being done to "get to the root of current problems." It grew rapidly and engaged the national industrial conference board to make researches.

Report Given to Woodin.

Early this week, it was learned, the committee met with Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin and presented its report to him. Several members also appeared before the senate finance committee in recent weeks, several of them at executive sessions, because they felt their remarks on the banking situation, since substantiated by the general banking moratorium, were too alarming to be made public at that time.

"We recognize there will be great hardships and injustices flowing from any program contemplating either currency inflation or a devaluation of the money standard," says the committee report. "The greatest evil that can befall us, however, will be to pursue the program of liquidation to a point which develops such economic difficulties and arouses such social protest as to bring about a chaotic situation; and then in the confusion of panic to attempt hurried remedies of inflation or devaluation which would bring upon us all the evils of both courses of procedure.

Explain Reason for Action.

"It is a lively appreciation of what such a double calamity might mean that has led us to give consideration to currency changes which in the eyes of many business men and bankers would first seem to be the acme of unsound projects.

"It is not given us to choose between a good and an evil, but we are compelled to make a choice of the lesser of two evils."

The report then sets forth findings of its research organization which may be summarized as follows:

1. The prices which the farmer gets for his products are from 30 to 63 per cent below pre-war levels, while "his taxes have doubled and debts greatly increased."

2. Public debt of the United States increased from five billions of dollars in 1912 to 38 billions last year. "In view of the shrinkage in values of listed securities and real estate, the amount of public and private debt must now be perilously close" to the total wealth of the nation."

Situation of the Banks.

3. It is estimated that 5,830 country national banks, with about seven billions in deposits, have no surplus nor undivided profits and only 16 per cent of their capital remaining, and that state chartered country banks are probably worse off.

4. Wage earners have only 46.1 per cent of the purchasing power they had in 1929.

5. The urban mortgage situation is "very bad," and life insurance companies have 27½ per cent of their assets; national banks, 5.8 per cent; commercial banks, 9.3 per cent; mutual savings banks, 52.8 per cent, and building and loan associations 90 per cent of their assets invested in such mortgages.

6. The short term debts of the federal government have increased by about five billions of dollars in the last four years, and this year the government must refund $2,650,000,000 of this debt.

"Unlike Previous Experience."

"The situation is unlike any previous experience in severity," says the report. "In the panic of 1873 wholesale prices of all commodities dropped from an index of 139 in April, 1873, to 115 in January, 1877, or 19 per cent. In this panic they fell from 141 in August, 1929, to 90 in January, 1933, or a decline of 36 per cent in a slightly shorter period of time."

In regard to the gold standard, the report points out that conditions at present are vastly different from what they were before the world war, when management of the gold standard throughout the world was controlled by British bankers. Since that time reparations and war debts have been added to the influences which moved gold from country to country. Another factor was the increase in the ownership by citizens of one country of securities issued in another country.

The committee recommends that alien depositors and alien holders of American securities be prevented from raiding American gold stores.

SCHOOLS SEEK TO DELAY PAYING CASH FUND $24,152,000 DEBT

The board of education will seek to postpone repayment of $24,152,000 borrowed from its working cash fund through legislative action. Ralph Condee, assistant school attorney, will leave for Springfield tomorrow night with a bill proposing the postponement.

The board borrowed $6,252,000 from the working cash fund in its 1930 tax levy, $14,900,000 in the 1931 levy, and $3,000,000 in the 1932 levy. The fund was created by the legislature in 1930 to place the schools on a cash basis. The law provided for the sale of $25,000,000 in bonds.

The working cash fund was transferred to the educational fund in order to pay salaries.

If the loans are not repaid within seven months after the date on which real estate taxes for the year begin to bear interest, according to the statute, an appropriation must be included in the next school budget to cover the loan. The school board dodged the necessity of making such an appropriation of $6,252,000 by adopting its 1933 budget before Feb. 1.

The bill drawn by Mr. Condee would change the seven months provision to twenty-four months.

now they're learning the value of good resistance

It isn't bad weather alone. It isn't having to sit in damp places or stay indoors where it's stuffy.

These may be partly responsible for troubles that start at this time of year. But with many people, low resistance is also to blame. They're in such a run down condition that they can't stand the slightest exposure.

These people should not wait for trouble to start. They should begin at once to build up their general resistance!

And now there's such a pleasant way. With Squibb Adex Tablets-10 D!

They provide two factors, indispensable for people under par—Vitamins A and D.

Physicians used to prescribe cod-liver oil to ensure people these protective factors. Now they are so much more easily obtained in this concentrate. Adex are chocolate coated, pleasant to take!

ILLUSION:

In India, the fakirs present a spectacle to tourists. Two lovely performers break bottles and lamp chimneys before the eyes of the audience, and throw the jagged pieces into a box already filled with broken glass. They step barefooted into the box and do an Oriental dance in the glass without injury.

EXPLANATION:

The performers toughen their feet in a strong solution of alum water and thoroughly rub them with pulverized resin before they appear. They throw the freshly broken glass around the edges of the platform. The glass on which they actually do dance is very thick, heavy, and filed or ground so that the sharp edges are rounded off. The girls just pretend to dance on the sharp glass.

One of the tricks of cigarette advertising is to pretend that "Heat Treatment" is an exclusive process, making one cigarette better than any other.

EXPLANATION: All cigarette manufacturers use heat treatment. It is a routine process of manufacture. The first Camel cigarette ever made was manufactured under the heat-treating process. Every one of the billions of Camels produced since has received the necessary heat treatment.

Harsh, raw tobaccos require intensive processing under high temperatures. The more expensive tobaccos, which are naturally mild, call for only a moderate application of heat. Heat treatment never can make cheap, inferior tobacco good.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

This is the most important statement ever made in a cigarette advertisement. Weigh its words. Consider what it means. Then try Camels.

HOOVER ENJOYS HIS FIRST DAY OUT OF OFFICE

Motors to Connecticut to Visit Friends.

New York, March 5.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover spent his first day in four years away from the cares and worries of official Washington today, and he apparently enjoyed it.

Tired out from the strain of the last days and nights of work and worry and from the wearing ceremonies of inauguration day, Mr. Hoover arose late this morning. He had gone to bed early the evening before and slept for twelve hours—his great burden of responsibility shifted to the shoulders of another man.

Accompanied by his son, Allan, and his secretary, Lawrence Richey, he left his thirty-third floor apartment in the Waldorf-Astoria Towers about 11 o'clock and motored in the car of Ogden L. Mills, his secretary of the treasury, to New Canaan, Conn. There the former President was the guest at luncheon of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rickard, old friends and White House guests. He returned in late afternoon to the Waldorf and spent the evening quietly resting in the carefully guarded seclusion of his suite.

No Engagements Today.

According to Mr. Richey, the ex-President has made no engagements for tomorrow. Mr. Hoover has several private business matters to attend to during his short but indefinite stay in New York, the secretary said, but no definite appointments have yet been made. From other sources it was learned, however, that one of the reasons why Mr. Hoover changed his plan to leave for California by sea Saturday was a desire to be available in case his experience is needed by the new administration.

Mr. Mills, the former secretary of the treasury, and other officials of the Hoover administration were still in Washington today participating with the new administration in discussions of the banking situation, and it was said that the former President wished to remain in reach if he is needed.

During a portion of his stay here Mr. Hoover is expected to participate in conferences with the directing heads of three charitable organizations of which he is chairman—the Belgian Scholarship fund, the American Child Health association, and the American Relief Association Children's fund.

May Head Child Body.

Mr. Hoover founded and has been deeply interested in the Child Health association, and it is expected that during his stay in New York the trustees of that organization will ask him to resume the presidency of the association, an office which he resigned when he went to Washington.

Mr. Hoover was accompanied to Connecticut today by secret service men, but in marked contrast to all his public appearances in the past four years, there were no uniformed patrolmen or screeching sirens of police motorcycles, to herald his coming. It was a quiet two hour drive, and the former president apparently relished it.

The suite which Mr. Hoover is occupying in the Waldorf-Astoria Towers, the residential apartment section of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, is guarded by uniformed patrolmen, secret service men and hotel employés. The hotel has been requested by Mr. Hoover himself to avoid publicity and every effort is being made to shield him from the curious and to give him the rest and relaxation from cares of office which he desires.

FRANCE JUGGLES ARMY LINEUP TO BRACE FRONTIER

Plans Stronger Defense Despite Personnel Cut.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 5.—Plans for a sweeping reorganization of the French army that will actually increase its effectiveness while reducing the number of officers and men have been worked out by Premier Edouard Daladier, who is also war minister, and high civil and military officials.

The project is understood to have the approval of the superior war council and the army general staff, and Premier Daladier has announced his intention of presenting it to parliament shortly.

Although Daladier has been largely instrumental in bringing the plan to completion, its adoption does not depend on whether his government remains in power, as it has been thoroughly worked out with permanent officials and does not form part of this particular cabinet's program.

Will Strengthen Borders.

Concentration at France's frontiers is the first aim of the reorganization, for military authorities consider the border defenses very inadequate. That the frontiers have the authorities worried was shown recently when it was announced that this spring a big shakeup of divisions would take place and several important points strengthened.

Besides inadequate frontier protection, Daladier's plan is inspired by another factor directly resultant from the war. That is the low birth rate between 1914 and 1918. Boys born in those years will be doing their military service between 1935 and 1940, and compared with classes in recent years their numbers will be small.

Aids Disarm Cause.

A more or less incidental factor in the new army plan is the fact that an actual reduction in the number of effectives will aid considerably the presentation of the French disarmament case at Geneva.

Authors of the plan declare that it will render an army of 800,000 men as effective as the present one of 500,000. By that they mean that thousands of men now quartered in scores of obscure interior towns will be sent to points either at the frontiers or easily accessible to the borders.

Experts estimated that with this scattering of France's troops all over the country it would take at least eight days to assemble a force of any size at the frontier. And from a tactical viewpoint the situation is even worse, for the garrisons are small and the men have had no experience in large scale maneuvers.

Plan Technical Reforms.

In addition to the wholesale movement of troops, certain technical reforms will be initiated. Divisions heretofore isolated will be trained to coordinate their movements with special machine gun battalions, for example, or with other special units or sections quartered in fortifications.

In the presentation of the plan, it is stressed that defense is its only object. What is wanted is a barrier all along the frontier powerful enough to withstand a massed attack at any point.

FIRST SUNDAY TAX COLLECTION YIELDS $932,800

Small Home Owners Bring In Hoarded Cash.

Small home owners filed into the county treasurer's office yesterday to turn over hoarded money in payment of 1931 taxes. A large part of the money bore evidence of having been hidden in teapots, fruit jars, mattresses, and other homely places of concealment. Sixteen cashiers were on duty to receive it.

The collections of the day totaled $932,800, including mail payments. Of $155,000 paid at the cages in the county building $65,000 was in cash. These cash payments accounted for 75 per cent of the total number of bills paid, as check payments were made principally on the larger tax bills. Of the total collections about $100,000 was taken in warrants, cash and checks by L. H. Besser, chief of the tax warrant division of the office at 6 North Clark street.

Extend Closing Time.

Fifty taxpayers were waiting at the doors when Chief Deputy Thomas F. Gahan opened the office at 8:45 yesterday morning. By 10 o'clock 500 property owners had paid their bills. The office was to have closed at 3 o'clock, but the success of the morning's collections prompted Chief Deputy Gahan to extend the closing hour to 5 o'clock. An additional 500 payers appeared in the afternoon.

A considerable portion of the cash was in bills of large denominations. The large bills, payers said, were received when bank deposits were withdrawn, and had been concealed about their homes. Most of the payers insisted on paying their full tax rather than take advantage of the installment plan of paying.

A. C. Hiester, 1939 South Hamlin avenue, paid the full bill on his home of $101.60. He said he had been saving up the money.

Can't Spend Large Bills.

"If change is going to be scarce large bills will do me little good," said Jacob Steg, 232 South Seeley avenue, as he paid a bill of $153.80. "Besides, there is no better way out of our troubles than payment of taxes, so that governments can function."

D. Hanna, 6714 Perry avenue, paid $164.42. He said his tax bill was lower than that of 1930, which convinced him that officials are doing what they can to aid and that home owners should do their bit.

"Here goes some money into circulation," said Albert Augustine, 2027 North Kedvale avenue, as he paid a bill of $79.42. "I hope a lot more will follow this, so that some of it may come back to me. If it does, I can pay more tax bills."

Mrs. Anna Bernd, 7156 South May street, paid $64.84. She said, "I have always paid my tax bills and will continue to pay as long as I can. I have been holding this money to pay my bill."

$8,500,000 in 1931 Taxes Paid.

Chief Cashier Ralph Hofbaur estimated that the day's receipts brought the total of 1931 collections to over $8,500,000. He anticipates a rush of taxpayers within the next ten days. The deadline date is March 15. To accommodate payers the office also will be open next Sunday.

Cash received by the treasurer has been transferred from his vaults to the vaults of the First National bank. It will be drawn from the bank vaults as rapidly as the office distributes money to the tax spending bodies.

RULES TAX BOARD DEPUTIES CAN'T HOLD HEARINGS

Assistant State's Attorney Hayden N. Bell yesterday made public his legal opinion holding that the board of appeals has no power to delegate hearing of complaints against the 1931 realty assessments to deputies. The opinion had been asked by Assessor J. L. Jacobs after Fred W. Brummel and George F. Nixon, members of the board, announced they would employ deputies to expedite the hearing of complaints.

Bell held that the only legal hearings on complaints must be before members of the board sitting as a board. The only assistants authorized by statute, he said, are those required in the actual conduct of the hearings to handle the appearance and rotation of complaints and record the findings of the board. A copy of the opinion will be presented to the board members today.

ROOSEVELT ASKS SUPPORT OF U. S. IN AIR ADDRESS

Makes Plea on Legion Program.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 5.—[Special.]—In his first message delivered from the White House President Roosevelt tonight over a nation-wide radio broadcast sponsored by the American Legion invited the support of all Americans to the efforts he is making toward a restoration of a "national well-being." The President said:

"I am glad that this, the first word addressed by me to the people of this country from the White House, can be dedicated to the great ideals of sacrifice and service. The men of the Legion and indeed all veterans and all good citizens know that the essential things of life are related intimately to these two great words.

Refers to War Service.

"The men of the ranks of the Legion, in the trying days of fifteen years ago, offered for the welfare and preservation of their country the ultimate contribution that a human being can give.

"The deep necessities of peace are no less serious. It is a mistake to assume that the virtues of war differ essentially from the virtues of peace. A life is a battle against the forces of nature, against the mistakes and human limitations of man, against the forces of selfishness and inertia, of laziness and fear. These are enemies with whom we never conclude an armistice.

Invites Support of All.

"To the end that the efforts I am giving in these first days of my administration may be crowned with success and that we may achieve a lasting restoration of national well being, I invite the support of the men of the Legion and of all men and women who love their country, who know the meaning of sacrifice and who in every emergency have given splendid and generous service to the nation."

Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the Legion, and other leaders spoke on the same radio program.

PASTOR HALTS HIS SERMON TO PURSUE AND CAPTURE BANDIT

Atlanta, Ga., March 5.—(AP)—A minister today quietly dismissed his flock in the midst of the morning service, warned the men to arm themselves, changed his frock coat for one bearing a deputy sheriff's badge and led a posse of several hundred in capturing a desperado suspect.

The Rev. A. C. Peacock was delivering his sermon in the Central Christian church when Charlie Pourron entered and told him he had seen a Negro carrying a shot gun and acting suspiciously in the west end section of Atlanta where two persons have been killed by burglars recently.

Mr. Peacock stopped his sermon, told the men to "go home and get your guns" and then in his capacity as a deputy sheriff led them and their neighbors in a chase that resulted in the wounding and capture of the Negro, identified by officers as Rader Davis.

MRS. HALL MUST REPLY TODAY TO LOVE THEFT SUIT

Mrs. Mary Cave Hall, defendant in the $1,000,000 suit brought by Mrs. Grace Williamson Willett for alleged alienation of the affections of Howard Willett, today must make her first formal recognition of the existence of the suit that sent her into seclusion three weeks ago at her home, 5490 South Shore drive.

The time limit expires today for the filing of an answer to the charges in the declaration made by Mrs. Willett in Superior court on Feb. 11 through her attorney, Bennison F. Bartel.

Ever since she accepted service in the suit Mrs. Hall has maintained the strictest retirement and has refused to see interviewers or photographers. Mrs. Willett, whose penthouse home atop 2130 Lincoln Park West was for years a gathering place for gay parties and social functions, has not restricted her public appearances, having made one address before a club and one radio broadcast, as well as carrying on her numerous other activities. Howard Willett, president of the teaming company, left Chicago ten days after the suit was filed for a Caribbean cruise.

None of the principals is expected to appear today in connection with the filing of Mrs. Hall's answer in the office of the clerk of the Superior court.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

PLAIN TALK TO FRANCE.

The French people and their government owe a debt of thanks to the American ambassador. Walter Edge, for his plain speech to the French newspaper men. It is a pity considerations of diplomatic etiquette prevented him from including his wise advice on the more conspicuous occasion of the Washington birthday address. However, it has been presented to the French press, which it is to be hoped will pass it on to the French nation. It would be an important service to Franco-American relations and, as Ambassador Edge truly said, a benefit, if it influences French opinion and policy, to France.

There can be no hope of a satisfactory adjustment of the financial and political relations of France and America unless the French government and people rid themselves of the fallacies that have dictated their theories of settlement and their attitude toward their obligation. There is not the slightest chance that the United States will merely cancel the debt owed by France and thus impose upon its own people without reason or justice the burden it deliberately and for the benefit of France assumed. The French public is able to cherish this false expectation because it assumes in the face of contrary facts that the United States and its people are in command of great riches and can afford to cancel debts owed them without embarrassment or injury. It is time for them to recognize realities. Mr. Edge has now told them that there will be no one-sided adjustment of the debt. There must be compensation for American sacrifices. We have already made great sacrifices, in blood and in money, through which the French people have substantially, indeed vitally, profited. The debt itself has been reduced nearly fifty per cent, and in return, as Mr. Edge reminds the French, we have been subjected to irritating and injurious measures in trade relations. The pretense that the obligation of France to the United States cannot be met does not survive fair examination. "Compensation," as Mr. Edge points out, "is not necessarily confined to gold transfer."

Equally true and timely was Mr. Edge's assertion that further delay in adjustment would be a hideous mistake. The condition of business and finance, not only in the United States but in the world, makes the earliest possible adjustment imperative. The alternative of repudiation ought to be unthinkable by the French nation. It would destroy their credit. It would bring about consequences infinitely more disastrous than any probable arrangement.

Mr. Edge speaks as a friend of France as well as a faithful representative of his own people when he expresses the hope that without delay a form will be found which will enable the French parliament to approve payment on account pending a general adjustment. Failure in this would seriously impair the possibilities of agreement in terms mutually beneficial. By manifesting a willingness to meet its obligations to the best of its ability, by making payment obviously possible for France at this juncture and needed by the United States in present circumstances, the way to self-respecting concessions and mutually profitable agreement will be opened. A persistence of French intransigeance, which is, we prefer to assume, the result of a want of informedness or consideration by the French press and public of the realities underlying the debt question, would be fully as injurious to the French people as to the American.

We hope Mr. Edge's candor will clear the air and make it possible for the French government to enter negotiations with ours on a basis which does not preclude understanding or agreement. One controlling fact the French nation must recognize unless it is willing to accept the disastrous penalties of repudiation: The United States will not accept a unilateral settlement of the French obligation.

A BETRAYAL.

The county board has voted its 1933 budget. The reduction of expenditures from last year's total is less than 1 per cent. The amount appropriated is grossly in excess of any reasonable expectation of income. The board has approved the fiction that 88 per cent of the 1931 taxes, now going into collection, will be paid. In the year which has elapsed since the 1930 bills became payable the collections have amounted to about 55 per cent of the total. The county board thinks that the people of Chicago have more money in 1933 than they had in 1932. That must constitute some kind of a record in plain and fancy thinking.

The county budget is a budget which all but guarantees defaults and nonpayment of employes' and bills. It is a budget calculated to do a maximum of damage to the county's credit. It is a budget which marks a breach of trust on the part of the members of the county board who voted for it toward their employes and more especially toward the public which elected them.

The board voted 10 to 5 for the budget. The men and women who refused to be a party to the betrayal deserve honorable mention. They are: Commissioners William Busse, Grace Fleming, George A. Miller, Amelia Sears, and John E. Traeger.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Confined in a brief message to the larger outlines of the problem before us and to general indications of practical policies and measures, the President's address is not to be taken as an explicit program. For discussion its practical suggestions must await more definite proposals of action. The country will accept as necessary the assurance of an early summoning of the congress and will be inclined to support the spirit and intention of the President to make full use of his great authority and influence to bring about expeditiously the measures required to deal effectually with the emergency, even to the extent, in case of need, of asking congress "for the one remaining instrument to meet the crisis—broad executive power to make war against the emergency, as great as the power that would be given to me if we were in fact invaded by a foreign foe."

The President put his finger on the basic evil from which the others have flowed when he speaks of the necessity for retrenchment of public expenditures. The drain of these has been undermining the credit structure for years and has culminated in this collapse. If the extension of executive powers to which Mr. Roosevelt refers is required to effect a drastic reduction of federal spending, we may be reconciled to it, even though we are aware, as we ought to be, that it is easier to abandon normal constitutional methods than to regain them. The President is on solid ground when he speaks of the immense resources of our country, moral as well as material resources. With the tax drain checked and with it removed the dread of confiscation, the vigor and resilience of the American people will reassert themselves, initiative, resourcefulness, and confident industry will restore the economic health and prosperity which have characterized the United States in the course of its inspiring progress.

President Roosevelt speaks with a confidence which is justified by the good will of the nation. He has for his practical support a majority in both houses of congress, and of a party fresh from political victory and we trust ready to follow strong and patriotic leadership.

"We face the arduous days that lie before us in the warm courage of national unity; with the clear consciousness of seeking old and precious moral values; with the clean satisfaction that comes from the stern performance of duty by old and young alike. We aim at the assurance of a rounded and permanent national life.

"We do not distrust the future of essential democracy. The people of the United States have not failed. In their need they have registered a mandate that they want direct vigorous action. They have asked for discipline and direction under leadership. They have made me the present instrument of their wishes. In the spirit of the gift I take it."

In this spirit the American people, regardless of party or condition, of doctrine or diverse opinion, loyally salute the new President and government and pray for their success in the trial of statesmanship which is before them and the nation.

Editorial of the Day

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

[THE TRIBUNE, November 15, 1907.]

The local banks have begun the issuance of small clearing house checks. In taking this action they have responded to the wishes of the community and, while also aiding their own position in the matter of cash, they will create no new indebtedness. They will at the same time furnish a convenient medium of exchange which will lessen, if not eliminate, the present confusion existing because of various forms of cashiers' checks being put out by different firms.

It should be made plain to those who have been finding fault with the banks because they have not paid out cash that a bank cannot in the very nature of its business issue on demand to depositors all the currency and credits it has received from them. Banks are operated in conformity with laws enacted for their regulation. For the purpose of facilitating trade they are expected to lend a certain amount of the money they receive. In the case of the national banks of the country they are expected to lend or invest 75 per cent of their deposits. They are required to hold in cash the other 25 per cent in their vaults for the transaction of current business. A national bank, for instance, may have $80,000,000 in deposits. Of this amount the law requires in the cities of Chicago, New York, and St. Louis that $20,000,000 shall be kept in cash in the bank's vaults, while the other $60,000,000 may be loaned out. These loans are made to merchants, manufacturers, cotton factors, farmers, small dealers, and, in fact, every class of business which at some time in the year requires more money than the person or concern has on hand to meet emergencies. These loans of a bank may run from thirty days to three months, six months, nine months, or one year. Manifestly a bank which has loans running for these periods beginning, say Nov. 1, 1907, cannot pay off at once all its $80,000,000 deposits. It cannot collect all the money due it in less than one year. It cannot make the borrower who has a note running six months pay his note before that date, and in a time when there is a strong demand for money cannot successfully go to its neighbors and sell to them the notes due it.

The national banks alone of the United States had out in loans last March $4,535,844,098. This credit extended to borrowers enabled the latter to purchase goods, increase their businesses according to demand, and meet their pay rolls. If this vast sum were withdrawn from circulation and kept in cash, banks would become merely warehouses for the storage of money, while business would come to a standstill. The state banks of the country hold subtantially the same amount of deposits as the national banks and have substantially the same amount of loans. And if the deposits were not loaned out there would be precious little use of carpenters, mechanics, railroad hands, workmen in factories, or laborers in other avenues of employment. And the banks would have no incentive for existence.

BACK WHERE HE STARTED.

Doctor: "You ought to be getting well by now. Have you carried out all my instructions?"

Patient: "Most of them, but I can't take that two mile walk every morning as you ordered. I get too dizzy."

Doctor: "What do you mean, dizzy?"

Patient: "Well, I guess I forgot to tell you. I'm a lighthouse keeper."—Women's World.

TRANSFERRED TRANSPORTATION.

An ambitious young man heard of the death of the junior partner of a big firm. He rushed into the office of the firm and cried:

"How about my taking your partner's place?"

"Excellent!" exclaimed the senior partner. "If you can fix it with the undertaker."—Tit-Bits.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

MORATORIUMS are fine things and we're strong for 'em, but it did get on our nerves Saturday to be stopped on Boul. Mich. every few feet by millionaires asking for a dime until Monday or two bits until Wednesday and that sort of thing. Not that we don't like millionaires; some of them at least are very harmless and pleasant people, but a dime here and a quarter there and a half dollar to this millionaire and six bits to that one of course gets very tiresome. Wonder what millionaires do with all that money they borrowed from us? Not that we gave them any, but we were just wondering.

DON'T GET THE IDEA we're hard hearted. Far from such. But we do believe in the eternal fitness of things. And we're going to make it a rule that we won't lend a quarter to a millionaire even if he is wearing his silk hat and says the butler can't find anything in the pantry for breakfast and he just wants a dime or two to get hot dog and a cup of mocha and java. The best we'll do under the circumstances is to advance him a quarter on the silk hat.

ASTRONOMICAL PROBLEM.

Lady, if you had been less lovely
And I had been more wise,
I would have searched the heavens
Instead of your brown eyes;

I would have kept a-going
On my way to church,
Instead of halting at your house
Your pulsing eyes to search;

For in all the solar system
Of worlds that wheel in space,
There isn't a single planet
As lovely as your face;

But they keep to their orbits,
While I turned out of mine,
And I must say that even you
Hardly kept to thine;

Now get back to your orbit
And do as a lady should,
For if you will be naughty
I scarcely can be good;

For men are seldom sinners,
Indulging in old lies,
Until they turn aside to look
Into a woman's eyes . . .

Lady, when I pass your house
Intent on prayers and such,
Please turn your lovely lips away—
But not so very much.

ABORIGINE.

WHILE WE OBSERVE with regret the number of people still unemployed, we note with even greater anguish that the persons who stick the pins in new shirts are still right on the job. (Ouch! Doggone it, we worked half an hour getting those pins out, but there's one we must have overlooked.)

A NEW DAY! A new President! A new deal all around! Three rousing cheers and we'll all stand by and do all we can to help. Three more rousing cheers! This is Monday; the Democrats assumed power Saturday noon. It is a pleasure to say that no criticisms of the new President and his administration have been made. Not a word. But, of course, yesterday was Sunday and the criticisms will not begin until today. And then—stand out from under!

THE NEW ADMINISTRATION had a wonderful send-off Saturday and Washington was full of happy Democrats. But today they have to check up and see what the Republicans have left for them to start national housekeeping with. And they'll begin by looking into the treasury. Oh, that's going to be just too bad. But the Washington monume t is still there and the dome on the capitol and the trees in the beautiful parks and the deep, quiet Potomac still flows on. Oh, there is much the Democrats can be thankful for if they only look at things the right way.

THE TROUSERED GIRL idea, which is filling lots of people with horror, doesn't excite us a bit. The gals may do a lot of talking and now and then let a photographer snap 'em with pants on, but they're only foolin'. The girls are never going to adopt trousers as a real costume. My dear, they couldn't show their silk stockings if they wore pants. And no display their silk stockings! Great hevings! Why, a girl might as well be dead!

RED FLANNEL UNDERWEAR.

SOME years ago, when we were sitting on top of the world, most of us abandoned red flannel underwear. These garments had long befriended our forebears as well as ourselves. They had earned the right to be called the friend of our race. But there was some talk that such garments were not pretty and were not worn by the four hundred, whereupon, with callousness characteristic of the time, we threw these established friends into the rubbish box.

When called upon for a defense the attorneys for red flannel underwear had no reports of research laboratories to offer as evidence and there was nothing to do but to let the culprit pass out. And now it appears that we were hasty.

For a quarter of a century we have been solving health problems one by one. The worst of the lot that remain are rheumatism and arthritis. Heart disease is rooted in rheumatism and arthritis. The delving into rheumatism and arthritis has just begun and only a few details are known. One group of facts relates to temperature. Heat is good for rheumatism and cold makes it worse.

It is accepted that the disease is far more prevalent in cold climates than in warm ones. People who are prone to attacks do better if they go south for the winter. The climate cure is being pushed. A dry, warm climate is thought to be better than one where there is much fog and rain and the air is saturated with moisture much of the time.

Examinations of the skin in different parts of the body made with very delicate thermometers devised to register surface temperatures show that arthritic people are as cold as they feel. They do not resist cold well. They have cold feet and legs. They suffer from exposure to weather and those of them who work in the open become stiff in the joints, they creak, and their fingers are crooked as well as stiff. They are said to be worn out with work and age, but the chances are that exposure to weather is responsible.

ASK YOUR DOCTOR.

Mrs. A. F. C. writes: 1. Can cancer attack the feet?

2. I read that we should watch any hard lump that remains over a long period.

3. I have had a lump for a long time on the inner side of the large toe, with upper part of toe below nail very hardened skin with sort of indenture in center and a large, open, but not sore crack in this indenture. Toe has scarcely any feeling when I touch it, the skin being so thickened. It troubles me as being very unnatural in looks and feeling, although it doesn't pain.

REPLY.

1. Yes. Cancer can develop in any location.

2. That is proper.

3. I wonder if you have a perforating ulcer? Such an ulcer is akin to Raynaud's disease, but not to cancer. What does your physician say?

SALAD OIL ON HAIR.

C. M. writes: Is the use of olive oil to slick down the hair harmful?

REPLY.

No.

LEAST OF EVILS.

L. S. writes: Will it do any harm to drink six to eight glasses of water every morning before 10 o'clock? All the fruits and vegetables I eat will not help me to cut down the laxative as this amount of water will.

REPLY.

This is too much water. But as between that and constipation on the one hand or taking laxatives on the other, the water should be the least harmful.

NAVEL HERNIA.

Mrs. W. C. L. writes: Will you write something on navel hernia in infants?

1. Does it clear up in the course of time?

2. Is there any other treatment except adhesive tape across the abdomen?

3. Is it painful?

4. What are the causes?

REPLY.

1. This form of hernia has a tendency to disappear in time. This tendency is greater than is the case with other hernias.

2. That is the best treatment. Wearing a binder cures many cases. The pad over the hernial ring should be large and soft. One that pushes into the ring unduly does harm. A few cases require operation.

3. No.

4. The umbilical ring remains open until after birth to permit the blood vessels to pass through. Therefore closure is apt to be incomplete as well as delayed.

ANOTHER NAME.

Mrs. K. W. G. writes: What is the meaning of petit mal?

REPLY.

Epilepsy. The manifestations are mild.

UNSAFE STRUCTURES.

Chicago, March 1.—[Friend of the People.]—I wish to call your attention to the badly dilapidated building to the rear of our home. This is a wooden structure which no doubt presents a distinct fire hazard. There is also a very unsafe structure on the corner which should be torn down or boarded up.

J. V.

The building at No. 1705 having been found to be in a dilapidated condition, the owner has been notified to put the building in a good and safe condition or wreck. Concerning the building on the corner, a permit has been issued by this department for alterations and repairs and the work is now under way. JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Deputy, Department of Buildings.

REAL ESTATE LIEN.

Chicago, March 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A is heir to property which consists of homestead and vacant land. There is a trust deed against the vacant property signed by the deceased and the heir. B is suing A to recover the amount of the note. 1. If A conveys her interest after suit has been started can transfer be set aside? 2. If B gets judgment against A can B garnishee A's widow award? 3. Will homestead rights prevent us from attaching her interest? 4. When settling estate does widow's award come before creditors' claims? 5. If property is forfeited to the state for taxes and assessments, what effect will that have on the mortgage? 6. After property has been forfeited to the state how long a time has the mortgage holder to redeem same? B. T.

1. The trust deed would remain a lien on the real estate, so that the holder could foreclose despite the transfer.

2. We do not understand the question.

3. Ordinarily homestead is waived in a trust deed.

4. Yes.

5. It might mean that the property after foreclosure would be subject to a tax cloud.

6. There is practically no limit. We could advise to better advantage if you had stated the nature of the proceedings that B is bringing against A.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

INTEREST ON LOANS.

Chicago, March 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Recently I made a loan on my automobile from a Chicago loan company. The amount of the loan was $75. From this they deducted $6.60 for insurance, $1.85 for recording fee, and I received $66.55 cash. Then I received a book showing principal of $75 to be paid in ten months plus 3½ per cent interest per month on the unpaid balance. Can they force me to pay for the insurance and recording fee and then charge interest, too? E. S.

Yes, but the insurance must be genuine and not a subterfuge to cover usurious interest.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 6, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Wilson, having proclaimed to the world, in his second inaugural address today, the principles that will guide the United States if it becomes involved in the world war, is considering tonight what steps he will take to protect Americans and American ships from the German submarine menace. The question of arming American ships to repel submarine attacks will be discussed with his cabinet tomorrow despite the failure of the senate to confer on the President this specific authority. Attorney General Gregory has given the President an offhand opinion that the executive possesses the authority in his own right to supply American ships with defensive armament.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The action of the twelve United States senators in preventing the passage of the armed ship bill by a filibuster in the closing hours of congress was denounced by massmeetings and legislatures in a number of states. In Oregon a movement was set afoot for the recall of Senator Lane, as is possible under the state constitution. In Wisconsin a petition was circulated demanding Senator La Follette resign his seat. In Nebraska a resolution was offered in the senate denouncing Senator Norris for his part.

LONDON.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Amsterdam says: "According to a Frankfort telegram received here, the German government has sent a wireless dispatch to Count von Bernstorff, former German ambassador to the United States, who is at sea returning to Germany, asking him to explain how the German note with regard to bringing Mexico and Japan into war with the United States was divulged."

WAR SUMMARY.—The Germans launched heavy attacks on the French line on the Verdun front. The British made further gains near Ancre river and consolidated positions won within the past three days. Rome reports that Italian forces gained strong positions on the mountain tops on the Trentino front. Cold and snow held up activities on the Russian front. One hundred and ninety-two ships, with a total tonnage of 514,559, have been sunk by German submarines since Feb. 1.

NEW YORK.—Approximately 50,000 Germans in the United States who have been unable since the beginning of the war to get back to the fatherland to fight with the Teutonic allies have left this country for Mexico during the last thirty days. Almost every one of these men is a German reservist.

HOBOKEN, N. J.—With the arrest here of Fritz Kolb, a German, the authorities expressed the belief that they had frustrated a well-developed plot to aid Germany by blowing up munitions plants in this country engaged in turning out contracts for the entente allies.

PRAYERS FOR THE PRESIDENT.

Chicago, March 4.—A new President is going into office today, a deeply religious man who has been a vestryman in one church for thirty-seven year. As Christian citizens of all denominations, let's offer a prayer each day that God will direct him in all his ways. We have fallen far away from the real values in life, let's never go back to the wild days of prosperity, but ask God's guidance to a stronger and more peaceful way of living. I am sure if we follow this plan we will have the strongest government and the most useful President the world has ever had. It's worth trying. Just remember, a prayer each day for guidance in the right direction.

ANNE JESTY ROGERS.

FROM THE SIX NATIONS.

Irving, N. Y., Feb. 25.—We, the undersigned officials of the Seneca, Tonawanda and Cayuga tribes of the Six Nation Confederacy of New York state, have had the pleasure of reading the very interesting editorial which appeared in your publication, THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE, dated Feb. 6, pertaining to the activities of the bureau of Indian affairs in Washington.

We are pleased to note that your editorial bore the title of "Being Done Good," for it is this very act of doing good which we feel not only interests the Indians but in a like manner should be of vital interest to the general public and taxpayers as well.

The enlightenment which you have so commendably presented to the public on this very important subject has contributed in no small measure great support of our recent open indorsement of Joseph W. Latimer, Esq., and our petitions of Feb. 2, which we forwarded to the Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt, President elect of the United States, to appoint this worthy and well qualified man to the position of commissioner of Indian affairs.

We feel confident that Mr. Latimer is the only man fit to assume the responsibility of curtailing the wasteful activities of this bureau because he is the only man who has openly presented in printed form a policy freely advocating this measure.

From our past experience we are further convinced that the appointment of the next commissioner of Indian affairs will greatly decide whether this tax devouring and Indian oppressing bureau will or will not be abolished.

RAY JIMERSON,
President, Seneca Nation of Indians.
CHIEF A. H. POADRY,
President, Tonawanda Nation of Indians.
ASHER W. PARKER,
Senior Chief, Cayuga Nation of Indians.

THE DAIRY STRIKE.

Troy Center, Wis., March 2.—Your editorial on the farmers' strike of last Saturday may read fine to you city people who have to pay high prices for what you get of the farmers' product. But as a farmer, I cannot see it your way one single instant. If your idea of our taxes being cut would help, I for one would say it would be only a small drop in the bucket. I do not know of any farmer but what would help the unemployed more than any one if we were only given a fair price for what we have to sell. There is not one thing that we are given even cost price for. This does not let us have 8 per cent on our investment.

Just for example, I started out five years ago this spring, bought four horses, $800; thirteen cows, $1,950; tools to work farm, $1,500; harnesses, $140, making a total investment of $4,390. At present prices from a good herd of cows for the butterfat, $60 to $75 a month is all I can get. And this is somewhat larger than it would be possible to expect if it were not that part of this milk is sold by the quart at 5 cents and cream for 20 cents. This is not the cream that tests 18 to 20 per cent butterfat that you have in the city; it is 30 per cent butterfat. We are paid at Chicago or Milwaukee market about 11 cents for it, and you pay from 60 to 80 cents for a much poorer grade. For butterfat we only get 18 cents, and eggs 10 cents. Now these are facts. Any one with a good fair mind cannot help but see that the margin between you and me is too great.

If the farmer got 40 cents for his butter, $1.60 for milk, $7 for hogs, $8 to $10 for beef, I do not think he would line his pockets with silver or gold. No, they would have to spend the added income for much needed repairs and back bills. It is impossible for any farmer that has to put his product on the common market to even break even today. How do you suppose it would seem to any of you city brothers to have to work from 12 to 16 hours, 365 days every year, and see what little you have steadily taken away until charity is your only hope?

Farming is one place where a person cannot keep his output at a given point, for some years his yield is high and another low. No man can govern this. That is why surpluses have to pile up and again fall short.

But now the dairy farmer is not making a surplus but is falling behind, and at that cannot even get a living wage for his work. A READER.

TARIFF ON COFFEE.

Peoria, Ill., March 2.—We don't like your editorial, "Tax on Coffee"; we don't think you are familiar with the situation else you would not write an editorial of this kind.

You say it is doubtful if a coffee tax would reduce consumption. Do you know that even now, because of the seriousness of the times, many people, if they are drinking coffee at all, are drinking very much less, or very much poorer quality than they have been in the habit of drinking some two or three years back?

If a tariff is added this will create additional hardships on people. Coffee cannot be classed strictly as a food, and just as surely it is not a luxury. It has become one of the staple items on the table of Americans, and it is one of those things that bring delight to every meal.

We believe your great newspaper has the interest of the general public at heart, and if this is true we hope you will thoroughly investigate the situation as regards coffee and the American people before suggesting in your paper that a tariff on coffee would be a good thing.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

J. J. Shubert's plan to adopt Chicago as the center of his creative activities in stage entertainment bears its first fruits in the form of an elaborately designed musical show called "The Red Robin," which had its première at the Grand Opera House Saturday night before an audience that seemed to have accepted the bank moratorium in a cheerful mood. Technically, the occasion was a "cold" opening; i. e., there had been no earlier performances for disciplinary purposes; but actually, it was a warm and spirited first night, with hearty response from the jury.

"The Red Robin" is a lyric amusement with decidedly romantic inclinations, and the sentimental mood of its story, coupled with the ambitious trend of its score, gives it full right to classification as operetta. However, the playbill calls it a musical comedy and there is no need to argue with the librettists over the matter of definition. The frontier between operetta and musical comedy has never been accurately surveyed, and perhaps "The Red Robin's" allegiance is divided between the two provinces.

A prologue, long enough to be called an act, deals with the last night of a Viennese playboy [Allan Jones] in his favorite tavern. To celebrate his forced departure to America in search of a fortune he makes merry with his cronies according to the custom of gallant tenors, chanting the praise of steins and wines and old Vienna's joys. Secretly, however, his heart is breaking, for he has been having a familiar interlude with the inn's prettiest flower girl [Martha Lorber]. They part in an ecstasy of operetta sorrow, singing the show's theme song, a bellow ballad called "True Love Can Never Die."

Twenty years after Allan Jones, his wavy hair faintly grayed but otherwise unchanged, returns to Vienna in search of his youth. He is now a typical American millionaire, according to the German idea, and is ready to use bank notes as confetti to express his mood of carnival. He is like an old grad, back on the campus for an alumni anniversary and doomed to a taste of disillusion, for the place he wants most to see, the old Red Robin inn, has gone out of business. All this occupies an act that is lively with music but feeble of plot.

But there is a surprise in store for Allan. The Red Robin premises have become the residence of the most comical comrade of his youth [George Hassell] who had married Allan's lost sweetheart [Martha Lorber] and begotten a daughter [also Miss Lorber] who looks exactly like her ex-flower girl mamma. So a party is arranged there, in imitation of the old Red Robin nights, and Allan, led in blindfolded, is turned loose to recapture his youth among fraudulent waiters, spurious folk singers and other myths. There he finds Martha Lorber, the daughter, and thinks she is Martha Lorber, the mother; and has a splendid opportunity to sing "True Love Shall Never Die" for the sixth and last time.

But when the hoax has ended Mr. Jones relapses sadly into middle age. He cannot marry Martha Lorber II. because she is pledged to a youth with a mania for fantastic dancing [Nick Long Jr.], so he consoles himself with an American widow who has been pursuing him for two acts. This strikes me as rather cynical behavior on the part of an operetta plot.

Mr. Jones sings with the casual rapture that he displayed in "Blossom Time" and "The Student Prince"; George Hassell tries his full range of comic tricks on a rôle without basic humor; J. Charles Gilbert adds his rich voice to the generous program of songs, and other "Blossom Time" and "Student Prince" alumni are well employed. Miss Lorber is a heroine of gleaming beauty, and Mr. Long is a dancer who can teach the famous Clifton Webb several steps. A dance critic [this is a new literary profession] would say learnedly that Mr. Long "has remarkable elevation," but I prefer to describe his gifts more lucidly, thus: He is a champion high jumper.

"The Red Robin" marks the debut of a new composer of theater music—Murray Rumshinsky, a gifted youth who led the orchestra at the premiere. His work suggests that he may turn out to be another Sigmund Romberg, whose style he follows in the more sentimental ballads. Keepers of theatrical archives may jot down the fact that the libretto is founded upon a German original, "Ein Tag in Paradies," which is said to have reached the American stage fifteen or twenty years ago under the title, "The Blu Paradise."

Winnetka Victor in Badminton Tourney with Geneva Players

BY JUDITH CASS.

WINNETKA Badminton players drove southwest to Geneva yesterday to play in the second annual tournament between Winnetka and Geneva and they went home at the end of the day tired but proud, for they had won six of the seven matches that were played. "Holly" Hunter and "Mac" Stone upheld the honor of Geneva by winning the most important match of the day, defeating "Chuck" Goodrich and Dr. Bruce Malcolm, but that was the only match in which Geneva players were the victors.

Dr. Malcolm and his wife are former Montreal residents, and, since badminton is a comparatively new game in this part of the country and an old one in Canada, Genevans did not feel as badly as they might have felt at being vanquished, for the Malcolms have coached the Winnetka players until they are topnotch in their serves and returns and better than the average Americans.

Mrs. Malcolm and Mrs. Howard Vincent O'Brien defeated Mrs. David B. McDougal and Mrs. Nathan D. McClure, and Mrs. Francis H. Hardy and Mrs. Perry Dunlap Smith were victorious over Mrs. J. McWilliams Stone and Mrs. Harry H. Hunter, again proving the superiority of the Winnetka brand of badminton over that of Geneva.

Mr. Hardy and Harve G. Badgerow defeated Donald S. Walker and "Sping" Mead, and Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm were the winners in a match in which their opponents were Mrs. McDougal and Mr. Stone. Mr. Goodrich and Mrs. O'Brien defeated Mrs. Stone and Mr. Mead in another mixed doubles match, and Mr. McDongal and Mr. McClure were beaten by Allan Harris and Morris Wilson in still another match. The Winnetka contingent reached Geneva about 11 o'clock in the morning and by 1:30 the matches were ended and all the players and spectators adjourned to the Geneva Golf club for a buffet luncheon which the Geneva Badminton club gave for the Winnetka players.

On Sunday, March 19, the Winnetkans will be hosts for a return tournament, and a large group of Genevans are planning to motor northeast that day to cheer on their team to victory.

Enjoy Spring Weather at Wayne.

Winnetka was represented not only at Geneva yesterday but also at Wayne, where several well known Winnetkans were spending the weekend enjoying the lovely spring weather by riding horseback and tramping through the woods. Miss Margot Atkin and her younger sister, Adelaide, and Miss Helen Bell were there with three young men enjoying the hospitality of the Dunham Woods Riding club, and also there were the Ambrose C. Cramers, the Corson Ellises and the Walter Hovings.

Mr. Dole met Mrs. Dole, the former Barbara Dunham, in Washington and he will go with her to Warm Springs for several weeks before returning to Chicago, but Mrs. Dole and the children probably will remain in the south until autumn.

It's no wonder society is showing so much interest in the national amateur ping-pong championships, to be played next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday at the Palmer house, for some of our statistically inclined friends have estimated that there are more regulation ping-pong rooms in Chicago

Large Plaid Patterns Also Make Appearance.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Bow tie-ers have finally crashed through with some stupendous new bows that will cover completely the female chest . . . bows that need the flamboyant adjectives of a circus press agent to ably describe their magnitude and proportions. You will see them covering the front façade of blouses, to which they are attached, and from which they can be separated for cleaning ordeals.

It will no doubt take a brave soul to plant them where they belong, but the effect is staggering either on the anatomy or hanging inanimately from a display rod. Without any dissenting arguments they are the largest bows in captivity . . . perfectly huge things of organdy, designed for the adventurous shopper who can't resist something new, slightly mad, and different enough to stop traffic.

Behemoth bows of white practically cover the entire front section of dotted organdy blouses . . . white dotted affairs with the dots as large as quarters splashed merrily against rosy red, sapphire blue, and other colored backgrounds, these bows spread themselves well over the shoulders and look like nothing else but a mammoth butterfly of white organdy.

These same designers discovered some outrageously large plaided patterns that are stunning to behold, large lavish squares of red, green, and blue against white . . . this stuff has been slashed and tied with the same grandiloquent gesture and staggering stiffened bows of the gay plaid organdy perch dizzily on short sleeved blouses of white. And the same wild plaid organdy fashions bows of this new outsize an exhilarating neck bows for white blouses.

Silver tongued salespeople tell you to wear these super-bowed creations with suits and tweeds and, to wear them right away if you would be blocks ahead of the parade. They may be giddy things, but they certainly are big enough to take your mind off anything as small as bank controlled allowances and the like.

If these colossal bows give you the jitters, the shops can supply you with circumspectly small bows, even moderately sized things that were comparatively large and enveloping a short ten days ago . . . flippant feminine bows of dotted organdy . . . red dots on white; black, blue, and green are also spattered on crisp white organdy. Or you can find lacey fragile bows of white and ecru tints for a snooty black afternoon costume, or stiffened lace in white and a coral rose, or net bows edged with lace.

After a while you will see the foamy cascades of white and colored lace jabots that have been revived for tailored suits . . . exact replicas of what was worn a decade ago. Direct opposites of this new-old jabot are the smart man-tailored waistcoats unblushingly fashioned without a back, the form-fitting white contrasts that suit owners wear and want with new spring man-tailored suits.

They are made with slit pockets, cut away curves, and with two rows of pearl buttons. The white numbers are always available, but watch for the gay yellows and soft blues as well as waistcoat vests of small checks and plaids and stripes, all featured in new spring fashion collections.

British Chemical Society Elects Notre Dame Priest

Notre Dame, Ind., March 5.—[Special.]—The Rev. Julius A. Nieuwland, C. S. C., Ph. D., professor of chemistry at the University of Notre Dame and the inventor of synthetic rubber, has been elected to a fellowship in the British Chemical society, according to word received here today. Father Nieuwland, prominent in organic chemistry research, last fall announced the discovery of a lacquer, synthetic drying oil, which is based on his discovery of a process to make synthetic rubber.

Music Sounds Note of Cheer Through City

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Whatever may have been happening in other quarters, music sounded an extra note of cheer yesterday. Concerts were given in the loop to large and well pleased audiences in the afternoon; other events from recital to opera were scheduled outside the loop in the evening.

Further interest in the cause of music was shown by a call for a mass-meeting at Orchestra hall next Friday afternoon at the end of the symphony program to discuss the future organization plans of the Friends of Music. Its sponsors say that interest in the project remains unabated, even though the erection of a building in the exposition grounds this summer has become an impossibility. There is, however, a keen desire to put up a permanent home for summer music which shall benefit Chicago long after A Century of Progress has become a memory.

Of the afternoon concerts the Chicago People's Symphony orchestra gave its first program of the season under the direction of P. Marinus Paulsen. Playing Beethoven's Fifth Symphony as principal number, and with briefer overtures and symphonic poems elsewhere, the organization was in the best form of its career, playing with mellow, firm tone in good obedience to the beat of its conductor.

The soloists were Adeline Davis, pianist, who was heard in a capable and well trained performance of Saint-Saëns' Second Concerto, and Iddrise Bucher, soprano, who sang Weber's aria, "Ocean, du Ungeheuer," from "Oberon," and later a group of songs composed by Conductor Paulsen.

The Metropolitan Church choir, J. Wesley Jones, conductor, gave an elaborate program at Orchestra hall, proving thereby how well trained choral music may be a joyous observance. A large organization clad in robes of white, they were superb in spirituals, and hardly less effective in music of a more complex nature. At times the Treble Clef choir appeared singly, at others the male chorus, at still others the two combined in ensemble.

The voices were good, the balance and attack excellent, and at all times there was great spirit. One of the numbers was "O Southland," sung last summer in the Chicagoland Music Festival program at Soldiers' field by a choir of 1,000 under Mr. Jones' direction. Soloists were numerous and highly approved.

Gay 'Tiger Lily' Quilts Brightened Life for Pioneers

Tiger Lily.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Tiger Lily.

The gay "Tiger Lily" design has bloomed for many years and in many colors since its early cultivation in pioneer days. It was pieced of red, yellow, and green prints on a cream background—unusually colorful in the days of its origin when dingy browns and lifeless grays were used in such abundance. Perhaps it was an effort on the part of the brave pioneer wives to lessen their hardships and to soften their rough surroundings with a bit of brightness.

For a pattern of this quilt design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street.

Good Morning!

Well, Joan Blondell, you great little trouper, you! Congratulations upon the splendid manner in which you've handled your first big emotional rôle!

Like the Tracys, Spencer and Lee [no, they're not related], Joan Blondell has the gift of absolute naturalness. Like them, she is endowed with a forthright and ingratiating personality that keeps you rooting for her.

Until now she has drawn comedy or semi-comedy rôles. "Broadway Bad" handed her the opportunity to go versatile—and she did, in a big way.

I can't claim the story has much in the matter of originality—it having been founded on the good, old plot of the good mother with a bad reputation who allows her name to be dragged through the mire for the sake of her child. It's what Joan Blondell brings to the characterization of the heroine which makes it an outstanding portrayal and raises the production from the ranks of mediocrity.

You will see her as a thoroughly nice little chorus girl married to a rich and worthless scion, who, aided and abetted by his mean old father, does her vurr', vurr' wrong. The name of a wealthy business man, backer of the show in which she appears, is all messed up with hers.

Though Tony's relations with Craig Cutting are impeccable, she, at a press agent's insistence, throws out a hard shell and capitalizes on her unfavorable publicity until——

The inevitable court scenes, where nothing really new happens, but which is suspenseful and surprising because of tall acting.

Miss Blondell has excellent support, according special mention to Ricardo Cortez as the unrascally so-called co-respondent, and Ginger Rogers as a loyal girl friend. Direction was able and, despite the triteness of the narrative, you will, I think, agree with me, that "Broadway Bad" goes over with a lot of snap.

See you tomorrow!

Modern Women Show Bravery of the Pioneers

Writer Claims Depression Proves Their Worth.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"The men," answers Rose Wilder Lane, well known author, whose recent work, "Let the Hurricane Roar" [Longmans], tells a story of pioneering days in Dakota.

And what are the women doing while the men wail and warn and point? They're not doing much talking, says Rose Wilder Lane. They're too busy for talk. Some of them are organizing and administering relief where it is necessary. Most of them are thinking harder than they've thought for years. And all of them are, somehow, pulling their families through, feeding their children and encouraging their husbands, and keeping up their own good, solid, common sense cheerfulness.

American women, contends Miss Lane, can always be counted on to be courageous whenever courage is required. Some sixty millions are proving it right now. If you do not hear them talking it is because they are busy with acts, not words. They have taken the brunt of hard times today just as they always have in the past, and their fighting spirit is doing its share to pull us through.

Miss Lane, who knows her pioneer women, likens today's woman to the pioneer woman "who fought behind the stockades when the Indians attacked," to "the pioneer farm woman who worked in the field and held the homestead against claim jumpers, prairie fires, crop failures, and sickness and starvation."

There's nothing much wrong with our American women, regardless of foreign visitors' criticism. As for "keeping up front," Miss Lane dismisses the charge as unimportantly affecting the great body of our women—BUT—

Keeping up morale is another thing. A woman's practical common sense tells her, for instance, that personal appearance has a great deal to do with personal mood. That the discouraged man becomes slovenly soon. That's why she sends her husband's good suits to the cleaner's and gives away the old ones; why she makes him change his collar and get a hair cut.

"Women know that a well dressed and well groomed human being is essentially, in himself, a better human being.

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess, while marooned in a catboat on Peconic bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville, meets a girl in a canoe who lives on a nearby island. Bart learns that she is one of the Bayleys, who have lived in seclusion on the island fifteen years. The father travels. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. He confesses in a letter left for Bart to being a bigamist. The Bayleys of Folly island are his second family. They know him as Matthew Bayley. He asks Bart, for his invalid mother's sake, to guard the secret, and leaves a fortune to provide for the Bayleys. Bart calls on Mrs. Bayley, posing as a lawyer, and finds her a lowly woman. She tells him, in confidence, that Alice isn't Matthew Bayley's daughter. When Bart realizes he loves Alice he resolves to stay away from Folly island. He becomes engaged to Lora Jackett, a distant relative and recent divorcée. The Bayleys visit New York and Bart sees them. Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new made fortune, known as "Scrap Iingy," has invited Alice to Wyattville. Bart tells Alice of his engagement. Alice and her mother are guests of the Warrens for the annual Wyattville flower show. Mrs. Burgess has the Bayleys in for tea. Alice sees a photograph of Trevor Burgess. Bart suspects his Aunt Augusta and Ingy Warren of stumbling on his father's secret and inviting the Bayleys to Wyattville to expose it.

INSTALLMENT XLIII.

A VOICE IS STILL.

Bart stood his ground. "How much more trouble do you intend to make, now that you know?"

"Barton, are you speaking to me?" She was big and proud, refusing to be bullied; then her face quivered massively. Could it be possible that Aunt Augusta was going to cry? "I don't want to hear of this terrible business again. I won't discuss it. And it has made me lose all faith in human nature—that a respected person, of the very finest family traditions, could be a party to such a vile business."

"What does Ingy Warren intend to do?" asked Bart.

"How do I know?" she snapped impatiently. Then irrevelantly, as though the idea haunted her, "It isn't right to bring all this down on Alice. Why should she suffer for what her mother did? And I don't see why her mother should be made a criminal of, merely for marrying. Constance Farnham is behind it all, as usual. Trust Constance Farnham to poison everything she touches."

Constance Farnham again. Where in all this witch's web of trouble and intrigue did the dark, narrow eyed Philadelphia lady come in?

"But I wash my hands of it all," decided Aunt Augusta. She tucked her book under an elbow and called, "Come, dear," to Hero, who fell like a cotton wad out of a sofa cushion.

"I'm here to find out," insisted Bart. "And if the information goes any further I intend to kill Ingy Warren."

"Have you gone insane?" The old woman's face was so pale that he would have been sorry for her, had there been any room left in him for pity.

"Maybe so. But I'm not trifling any more. What about Mrs. Farnham?"

Her voice began to flutter and wheeze. "This is a dirty business, and for the family's sake I intend to say nothing more. But why attach so much blame to Ingy Warren? Why not punish the guilty party? Do you know how diabolically cruel Constance Farnham has been through it all? It's her Italian blood; her grandfather was a La Ferra ——"

"But what's she got to do with it?"

"Everything. Don't you even know that?" In spite of him she was moving away. "Why don't you go to Constance Farnham and find out? This is the last I'll say to you or anybody else."

Then very formally, without the least show of resentment, the grand old spinster smiled and said, "Good night." She seemed to sweep through him, over him, as she passed on her way toward bed.

So there was another voice to still; and out of that how many voices would sound, clamoring scandal? It would be worse than useless now to stage a melodrama. That would be merely a clumsy, noisy way of spreading the news to the four winds. Ingy Warren—after all, he was just one small, mischievous mind centered on the reputation of Trevor Burgess. But Ingy was a coward, his mouth could be scared shut. Although it would fill him with an artist's joy to find himself the author of a distressing comedy that would keep Wyattville for a long time in the limelight, Ingy knew how to be discreet, and he valued his skin highly.

But how about Mrs. Farnham? Where did she come in? A narrow and grudging Philadelphia aristocrat, somehow faintly related to mother, how did she hold the key to the hidden behavior of a man who had covered his tracks so well during nearly half a lifetime that even his gossipy home town had not suspected him?

Yet Mrs. Farnham was the key. Aunt Augusta, startled out of her weighty calm, had insisted on that one point. She had washed her hands of the whole affair. Family pride and loyalty forbade her going on with her living detective story, now that she knew its full meaning. But Bart must talk to Constance Farnham. Constance Farnham, the wicked and cruel. . . .

All night long he sat up, waiting for morning, when he could go to see Mrs. Farnham. The idea of bed, the scratchy sheets, the stony pillow, revolted him. He sat half dressed, his bare feet upon the bed. Sometimes he got up and prowled for more cigarets. He thought of opening a bottle of Scotch and drinking it out all alone. But that would do no good. His mind must be clear in the morning. If only he could sleep a little. . . . Must see Mrs. Farnham and stop her cruel tongue. . . . Did it burn like his, from the poison? . . . Must see her and find a way. . . .

He was awakened by bright sunlight and Ella's knocking on the door. A quarter of ten. Struggling out of his chair, he felt a hard lump against his hip. The revolver. Dizzily he took it out and laid it on a dresser. He'd be needing it later. A picture of himself in the full length mirror was so grotesque that he laughed insanely. Himself in an undershirt and trousers, barefooted, his sweaty hair sticking every which way. He might have been drinking, his face was so puffy, his eyes so red.

But this wouldn't do. Energetically he stripped and stepped under the needle shower. That was the stuff, scalding hot, in his eyes, down his spine in his soapy hair. Then a quick, stinging blast of cold water. Wow! That brought life back to a man. Life ought to be like that, nothing tepid, all hot and cold. Brace yourself, old boy, and you can meet anything. . . .

He made a dandified toilet, choosing one of the pongee suits his tailor had made him for the bridal journey. The tie he knotted was almost as roseate as one of Ingy's. Breakfast came in on a tray, but he only took the coffee, black and boiling. And another cigaret.

His immediate idea was to get away without his mother's seeing him; but this was his first failure of the day. In going to the garage he had to pass the garden, and there she was, smiling at him; and in her look he seemed to see the appeal of a pretty child, trusting utterly in his strength, knowing that everything was all right because he had told her so. The sight of her, so happy and confident in him, shook Bart unexpectedly. But he braced himself, went over, and kissed her good morning.

"How stunning you look," she smiled. And because he had to say something, he explained.

"Hennessy always wangles me into pongees. Whenever I order clothes he says, 'And two pongee suits, Mr. Burgess.' They're good for about four minutes. Then they wrinkle up like dried apples."

"O, I'm just wearing these because it's so darned hot. Got to shoot a round of golf with Wy—if it's not too late. Whew! I don't know why I was so lazy this morning." He had a self-conscious fear that the revolver was showing under his thin coat. "Don't keep lunch for me. I'll pick up a bite at the club."

Filmland Fears New Campaign of Censorship

Urges Cleanup Within to Avoid Regulations.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., March 5.—The heavy threat of censorship, to be forced upon Hollywood from outside unless the producers themselves undertake to clear up their sex dramas from within the industry, has become a seriously disturbing consideration here.

Word has penetrated to film magnates that the recent succession of films like "Red Headed Woman," "Red Dust," Age of Consent," "No Man of Her Own," "Kongo," "Virtue," "She done Him Wrong," and "The Sign of the Cross" [in certain scenes] has done the industry no permanent good, although each of the films mentioned has been itself a box office success.

Paramount now is beginning to show signs of worry about "The Story of Temple Drake," which is the picture that George Raft thought too rough for himself to appear in. Paramount is going to change the title again—it originally was "Sanctuary." Another story, "Possessed," by M-G-M, had to be partly reshot before England would allow its exhibition at all.

The California bank holiday had a side issue in the closing of some of the county building offices. The marriage license bureau did not open yesterday, which considerably upset Lew Brock, producer of comedies for Radio-RKO, and Miss Helen F. Collins, who had gone downtown to the license bureau expecting to get their permit to wed. The Brock-Collins marriage accordingly has been postponed until the banks and county offices reopen, which may be any day from tomorrow to Thursday. Miss Collins is a Washington, D. C., girl, niece of Austin Parker, who played in a couple of comedies at RKO while under the spell of film ambition last year.

Edward Everett Horton and José Monjica will leave Hollywood Thursday for Europe. Horton leaves on concluding his part with Chevalier in "A Bedtime Story," and will appear in "It's a Boy" for British Gaumont.

Monjica leaves for a concert tour abroad, opening in Berlin on March 31. Monjica is winding up a rôle in Fox's "Forbidden Melody" with Conchita Montenegro and Mona Maris on the Fox lot.

Ruddy, robust, rollicking Wally Beery was the unanimously chosen toastmaster for the annual big hilarity banquet of the Bilge club at San Pedro last night. In discussing the annual Bilge club party, "last night" is only a figure of speech; part of the party lapped over into today. The Bilge club is an organization of shipping men, yachtsmen, and seafarers generally at the port of Los Angeles, which includes San Pedro, Long Beach, and Wilmington, and when the sea dogs gather for their annual dog fight it's considered quite a compliment to be invited as Beery was.

M-G-M is proud its cameras are grinding on nine new films, with ten in preparation for starts and five in the stage of being edited for release. This is one studio that has been attempting to keep the home fires burning. M-G-M went to the length of digging up money to pay its employés part of their regular salaries yesterday, although it took a lot of conniving to get hold of that much money, with the Los Angeles banks closed for their third day.

Katharine Hepburn is teamed to appear with John Barrymore in a coming Radio film, not yet titled, after she returns from her hospital and recreation stay in Hartford, Conn., and New York. She and John played together in "Bill of Divorcement" about a year ago, and that one picture "made" the Hepburn career. Lowell Sherman is to direct Hepburn in "Morning Glory" this spring, but it won't be the Barrymore film that Sherman will direct.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

(Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.)

THE CLEWS TO JUDD'S MURDER.

What a sap that butler must have thought him. Suicide! Well, he'd play dumb.

Now that the routine was finished and the body of Smythe Judd removed, he sat down in the chair at the desk that had been occupied by the dead man. Judd was killed while working on a ledger he had brought home from his office. On the blood stained page there was an incomplete entry for Dec. 15, under heading Confidential Disbursements.

Buck picked up the fountain pen Judd had been using and found it dry. Well, he'd take everything that might have any significance.

Where that shifty-eyed butler made his mistake, if investigations proved he was alone in the house with Judd, was in overlooking the fact that an automatic always ejects the shell up and to the right! And look where he'd found it . . . ! To the left! Well, the professor had told him nothing was insignificant in crime detection.

As he closed the ledger Buck noted another interesting fact. The blood spotted cover of the ledger was NEW, whereas the pages were OLD! I wonder now why he had this rebound, he thought as he picked it up with the shell, gun, and pen to take to headquarters.

10:30 butler heard shot
Found Judd slumped over desk
Shot through right temple
Butler called police
Touched nothing but phone.
Well, that butler made more than one mistake! He'd swing for it, too!
WHAT OTHER MISTAKE DID THE BUTLER MAKE? HE WAS CONVICTED OF MURDER.

[See solution on page 17.]

Powders Made to Glorify a Girl's Beauty

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

We hear it said, in a reproachful way sometimes, that the beauty trade somehow manages to survive where other and so-called more legitimate businesses feel the depression keenly. Well, maybe it's not merely woman's vanity that accounts for the beauty trade phenomenon. It just may be that, as a trade, they never rest with yesterday's successes. There's always something new—and often better—up the sleeve.

Take powders, for instance. Instead of trying to pass off old stock as the popular thing, we see all manner of new and intriguing shades to separate the woman from her dollar or two.

For a long time we have had offered for evening wear mauve and green powders. There has been a steady buying of these shades by women who "glow by night." If not by the average woman. This type of powder belongs in the luxury class, we'd say. But do you find the powder people sitting down weeping for the good old days, or nights, rather? On the contrary, they're out with a newer, gayer, grander mauve powder, and green. A jade green for blonds and a mauve for brunettes and gray haired women.

Then, too, the powder trade has allied itself with the dress trade in a progressive way. New powders become necessary adjuncts of the new shades of dress. A new gray of a new beige, let's say, or a French or perhaps Eleanor blue—and the old makeup has to be changed. Rather, the woman shopper is encouraged to wear a color with the knowledge that she can now obtain a makeup shade that will flatter.

Another comparatively recent development in powder is the soft mat finish obtained by certain of the cosmeticians. A subtle covering, this. There's a question whether a lady is powdered at all, but there's never a question about her nose being shiny. It isn't.

and its suburbs than in any other city of the world. Laundries and furnace rooms, even dining rooms and nurseries, have been converted into elaborate ping-pong quarters.

Take, for instance, the Joseph Cremins in Scott street, who entertain parties of friends every week at basement ping-pong. And the Elmer Stevenses on Fullerton parkway, who frequently convert the nursery into a game room. The Ronald Chinnocks play ping-pong in the attic of the Newton Farrs' large house on Woodlawn avenue, and the Lawrence Scudders, among Lake Forest's champions, on the dining room table.

All of these ping pong enthusiasts and several hundred more will be on the sidelines for the national tournament sponsored this year by the Interfraternity club. At the Waldorf-Astoria in New York last season the championships were an event of social magnitude.

Among those who have already reserved boxes to watch Coleman Clark of Glencoe defend his title are the Raymond Ashcrafts, the Hunter Dicksons, the Frank W. Lewises, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Patton, and Vincent Bendix.

Interesting News from Sarasota.

A letter from Sarasota, Fla., brings interesting news of the Chicago folk wintering there and the letter writer mentions particularly the fact that there are fewer luxurious cars on the west coast than the east. She has just gone to Sarasota from Miami. She writes that the Stanley Fields commute between town and their white mansion on the bay in a little car which their daughter, Mrs. T. Clifford Rodman, drives to the fish market with her mother on the front seat beside her almost every morning.

The Edson Keiths, the D'Orsay Palmers and the Michael Cantacuzene-Speranskys also drive inexpensive cars and are seen daily on the streets of Sarasota. Princess Cantacuzene is deeply interested in civic and welfare work.

Mrs. Keith, whose sun parlor has been turned into a "monkey cage" for her pet marmosets, has had swings and rustic ladders built about the great screened porch, and as one walks up the quaint coquina path to the house a china cat awaits the opening of the door.

Mr. Keith is devoted to his pipe organ and spends hours daily enjoying his music. Orange trees loaded with fruit and blossoms border the broad walk to the boat dock, and there is an air of tranquillity about the place that is equaled only by that of the Palmers' place further down the shore. Mrs. Keith had hoped to raise oysters and was establishing a large oyster bed in Sarasota bay, but learned that the government requires great care and special feeding for all beds "planted" by residents, so she gave up the project.

That Mr. and Mrs. George A. Seaverns are at The Inn at Nokomis, enjoying the salt air and deep sea fishing, is another bit of news contained in the letter.

Welton-Earle Wedding in April.

It's less expensive, thinks Arthur Dorman Welton Jr., to marry than to commute between Chicago and Baltimore. Mr. Welton has been making as frequent trips as the law will allow (no pun intended, for he is a lawyer) since the announcement of his engagement last September to Miss Juliet Gover Streett Earle, the daughter of Swepson Earle of Baltimore. The wedding is to take place at high noon on April 29. Mr. Welton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Welton of Bellevue place.

Beginning today the eligible young Italian baron, Alessandro Sarpi di Revisondoli, hopes to be able to make a date for tea or dinner. Since his arrival in Chicago early Saturday morning he has been "on the go" every minute tending to business for A Century of Progress, as well as his home government.

He has come here as the second of the two Italian commissioners appointed by Mussolini to the World's Fair. Prince Potenziani was here for a fortnight in February to decide on plans for the Italian pavilion and turn the first shovelful of ground. Now Baron Sarpi—once an aeronautic attaché of the Italian government in China and a member of one of Pisa's oldest families—will carry forward the prince's plans.

He spent Saturday on the lake front between 12th and 22d streets. And yesterday he was a special guest at a concert given by Chicago Italians at the Germania club. Last night he conferred a decoration of the Italian government on Father Cesar Molinari for his 25 years of service at St. Michael's church.

Baron Sarpi will be here a month at the Drake hotel. In June he will return to this country with Prince Potenziani and the famous Marconi, he hopes.

College Club to Hear De Lanux.

This time the Chicago College club has scored a scoop. Pierre de Lanux, the brilliant and handsome Frenchman whose visit to Chicago has been anticipated for weeks, is to make his first public appearance here at a dinner the club is having tonight at the clubhouse in Delaware place. M. de Lanux, the secretary of the Paris office of the league of nations, will give the club members "A Twenty-five Year Plan for World Economics."

The French Consul General Rene Weiller and Mrs. Weiller, the British Consul General Lewis Bernays and Mrs. Bernays, and Titus Zdzislawski, the Polish consul general, will occupy places at the speakers' table and Miss Ellen Holt of Lake Forest will be one of the hostesses.

M. de Lanux will be in the city visiting friends for at least a fortnight, for he has a date with the Council on Foreign Relations on March 18 and with the Juniors of the Alliance Française next Saturday. There is also rumor that he is to be at the Fortnightly some time in the interim.

Today at 12:30 o'clock the Fortnightly is to have a round table discussion of "European Alignments of the Future," with Prof. Bernadotte E. Schmitt as the leader.

Today also brings the first one of the Lenten lectures sponsored annually by the Chapel Guild of the Cenacle. The Rev. Alphonse Schwitalla, dean of the medical school of St. Louis university and head of the American Catholic Hospital association, will speak in the drawing room of Mrs. William H. Wildes' apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive. Mrs. William Roy Carney, president of the Cenacle guild, will introduce Father Schwitalla.

Guests at French Teas Dwindle.

The number of students who attend the Monday French teas has sadly dwindled as one by one the girls have gone away. Miss Edna Doering is in Florida, Miss Caryl Bloomingston and Miss Betty Whately are on a West Indies cruise, Miss Elizabeth Baum is in the south and soon Miss Barbara Eldridge will have departed with the Edwin M. Ashcrafts and their daughter, Virginia, on a cruise.

Today the tea is being held "chez" Miss Ethel Dixon, and as most of the members have seized this Lenten period as an opportunity to think of their figures, they have all asked Miss Dixon to serve perfectly awful sandwiches and stale cakes, the better to put temptation from them.

In town yesterday Mrs. Leonard Busby had a tea party for her daughter, Janet, to show off her newest portrait, one by Mrs. Irving Allen. And out in the country, in Glencoe, Miss Alice Katherine Mills was entertaining a group of friends at tea.

Invitations are in the mail today for the dinner the Association of Arts and Industries and the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Interior Decorators is to have the evening of March 16 for Lord Ronald Gorell at the Congress hotel. Lord Gorell, 47 years old and one of the most versatile men in Europe today, is to tell about "The Future of Art in Industry."

Without doubt he will be widely entertained during his brief visit here, for he has a wealth of entertaining experience at his disposal. Educated at Winchester and Harrow and at Balliol college, Oxford, he has played university cricket, become a barrister, shot big game in Africa, and served on the editorial staff of the London Times, as well as the general staff at the London war office. In politics Lord Gorell is a member of the National Labor movement.

William Nelson Pelouze, Sewell L. Avery, James L. Donnelley, Robert B. Harshe, Frank G. Logan, and Mrs. George Woodruff are among those interested in the Association of Arts and Industries.

And, speaking the arts and crafts, the Winnetka Woman's club is to hold its annual exhibit tomorrow at the clubhouse. All the articles that will be on display are the result of the craftsmanship of Winnetka residents. There will be, among other things, a cup by Frank Windes, a copy of an old Mycenaean cup spoken of in Homer's "Odyssey" and used in 2000 B. C., and a lovely petit point cover that portrays the Van Wagenen Allings' house in Lake Forest.

The exhibit is to be open from 11 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the evening. At 3 o'clock Edmund Giesbert of the Art institute will speak on "The Art of Different Periods." Mrs. Montague Ferry is the general chairman.

The Children's Benefit league will meet at 10:30 tomorrow morning at the Auditorium hotel.

Keeps Age a Secret Brushes Away Gray Hair

Now you can really look years younger. With an ordinary small brush you just tint those streaks of patches of gray back to your natural shade—whether blonde, brown or black. It is so easy to do—at home—with Brownatone. Over 20 years success. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Defies detection. No tell-tale "dyed" look. Cannot affect waving of hair.

No need to guess. First cut a lock of hair from your head and apply a little of this famous tint. If Brownatone does not give your gray, streaked, dull, or faded hair its natural color, youth and luster, your money back. Only 50c.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., March 5.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt and his family attended the morning service in St. Thomas' Episcopal church this morning and all took communion, it being the first Sunday in the month. In the party were the President's wife, his mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt; Mrs. Dall, and Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, all guests in the White House. It also was Childrens' day at St. Thomas, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, rector, giving a five minute talk to them after their Sunday school closes, on each Sunday.

The distinguished party was quite thrilled with the sight of the children in church, who all departed after their part of the service was over. After the regular morning service they had communion, Mrs. Roosevelt and her mother-in-law taking their regular turn to go to the chancel rail, the President remaining in his pew and being served there with the wine and wafer. The wife and mother of the President went together, the latter leaning upon the arm of the former and the former always putting her mother-in-law ahead of her, a gesture which thrilled every one who watched them.

The first lady was becomingly gowned in a suit of black tailored heavy crepe, the jacket having a black fur collar and a frill of soft white showing in front. She wore a small black tailored hat with a touch of white on it. Mrs. James Roosevelt also wore black with a narrow brimmed black hat.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt had a few guests dining with them this evening in the White House, their house party being composed only of members of their immediate family.

Sachs Asserts Asthma Ruled Life of Proust

Describes Night Visits to Avoid Dust.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

MAURICE SACHS, the author of "The Decade of Illusion: Paris, 1918-1928" [Knopf], told some interesting and trenchant things about Marcel Proust and Andre Gide the other morning in a lecture. "Why there should be all this arguing about whether Proust was snob or not I do not see," he said. "Of course he was snob. I am snob. All of the people I know best are snob. All of the most amusing people anywhere are snob in one way or another. Lady Cunard is snob about entertaining royalty. Her daughter, Nancy Cunard, is just as snob about sur-realistes.

"But it was not snobisme which was the basis of the tradition about Proust. It was asthma. From boyhood he suffered from asthma. Finally it became so bad that he dared not go out in the dust of the daytime. Only at night when there was little traffic in the street did he dare to leave his house. He would ring up a famous hostess and say that he would call on her at 3. Every one knew that he meant 3 a. m. and not 3 p. m., and that hostess would have everything prepared just as if she were receiving him for afternoon tea.

"He would stuff his pockets full of fruit, usually grapes, no matter what the season, and with his mouth filled with grape seeds to catch the dust he would rush from his house into a tightly closed cab, ride to his destination, again fill his mouth with grape seeds and rush out and into the house of his hostess. Near dawn and just before the street cars began running and the streets were filled with movement, Proust would hurry home to his cork-lined room.

"In that room in nine years over fourteen volumes were written, the greatest work of the generation in France. His death is something which no imagination could make up. The doctors who attended him all agreed that it was a miracle. He died, they said, six months before the breath of life left his body. But he was determined to finish his great saga. And it is the truth that when he wrote 'The End' to his manuscript the pen dropped from his fingers and only a few moments later he died."

Proust, Andre Gide, and Jean Cocteau were all members of the upper bourgeoisie by birth, M. Sachs said. Of them Proust became the chronicler of the Guermantes, the most sophisticated of the inner social circles, Andre Gide became the greatest Protestant writer in a Catholic writing community, and Jean Cocteau the most widely felt influence in the art of his day.

ENGAGEMENT

Dr. and Mrs. N. F. Brown of Oak Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Avis Ann, to Alfred Lawrence Price, lieutenant in the United States army. Miss Brown is a graduate of the Columbia School of Music and Mr. Price is a graduate of West Point.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Asks for Clothing.

"My father is dead. I am living with my mother, a younger sister, and brother. We are getting food from the charities, but we need clothing, which we have been unable to get. My sister is 16, my brother is 14, and I am 18. I wear size 38 and need a suit and coat. We also need a cook stove, as our gas has been turned off and we have no way to cook.

"J. M."

What a problem clothing has become for the poor and unemployed! This family, for instance. Soon, they will be unable to go out of doors if some one doesn't come to their rescue with the much needed garments.

Wishing Child Were Different Is Dangerous

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"I need people," said a woman to me the other day. "Now, Sam doesn't." Sam is her husband. "After we've been reading and writing and working at our music for a certain number of days I simply have to see people, go to a party, or something. But Sam could go on and on. Perhaps he's more self-sufficient than I am. I guess I'm a pretty gregarious animal," she finished.

I know two boys who show a parallel difference in personality. One of them is always "going places and doing things." He belongs to clubs, joins in all his school's social activities and accepts all invitations to parties and week-ends.

The other boy is not at all like his friend. He likes other children, but he doesn't seek them all the time.

His mother worries about it. Not having made the most of her own social opportunities, she wishes her boy would. An experienced teacher reassured her:

Probably those two boys will grow up being as different as the husband and wife in the first story. That woman being a clever and fond wife accepted his differentness from herself—she more than tolerated it. She understood it.

The mother and father who can do the same are wise. The parents who are not wise are those who cling to an ideal or pattern and are disappointed because their children do not fit it—like the conventional mother who bemoans her daring and unconventional child—or the aristocratic, aloof parent who almost disowns the daughter who has what she calls "plebeian" tastes—or the intellectual father who is snobbish about his son's talent for all things manual. These parents are digging a chasm between themselves and their children.

Try to accept and really understand your child who is different from you or from your ambition for him, and help him to develop along his own lines.

Orange Flavored Sauce Best Complement.

BY MARY MEADE.

So many recipes are in demand this week that there's nothing for it but to turn to and talk meal conjuring today from start to finish. And while we're in the mood, don't forget that we have a huge assortment of recipes on tap if you are running low on new cookery ideas.

First from Mrs. D. J. B., a question on wild rice cookery. Wild rice can, of course, be cooked much as is white rice, but there's another way that will give even more delicious, fluffy results.

WILD RICE COOKERY.

Wash the wild rice in several changes of cold water until the last wash is clear. Soak over night in cold water and pour that water off. Cover with more cold water in a good sized kettle, add a little salt and boil steadily for twenty-five minutes. Now drain, uncover, and let the rice steam dry over a low heat. Do not stir in the process of cooking or steaming.

Now a little French dessert pancake for Miss E. E.:

CREPE SUZETTES.

1-3 cup powered sugar.
¼ teaspoon salt.
1 cup milk.
2 eggs, well beaten.
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.

SAUCE.

Juice and grated rind of 1 orange.

Sift the dry ingredients and beat in the milk, eggs and rind. Beat two minutes. Bake on a hot griddle in thin, five inch pancakes until golden brown on both sides. As soon as the pancakes have been fried, dust with powdered sugar, roll them separately and range side by side on a platter. Pour over them the sauce. To prepare it, cream the butter and sugar and blend with this the juice and rind. Serve piping hot as a dessert.

CHECKERBOARD SANDWICHES.

Interesting sandwiches for tea are made as follows: Trim the crusts from a loaf of white and a loaf of whole wheat bread, each a day old. Slice both breads in from one-fourth to one-half inch slices. Butter each slice on one side with creamed butter. Now, alternate the brown and white slices, allowing seven slices to each stack. Half should begin and end with a brown slice, the other half should begin and end with a white slice. Press the slices together firmly. With a sharp knife cut downwards carefully, slicing the pile into what are known as ribbon sandwiches. [By the way, these in themselves are attractive and may be served at the same time as checkerboard ones.]

When all the stacks have been carefully sliced, take one of the slices which has brown bread on both edges, lay it flat, spread lightly with butter and lay on it a ribbon slice which has white strips of bread at either edge, laying the strips running the same way on each slice, with each brown strip falling over a white one. Butter the top of this slice and continue alternating the two kinds of slices until the pile is as high as it is wide. Press firmly together and once more cut it down in slices which should make perfect little checkerboards. It is important that the slices be well buttered and pressed together or the checkers and stripes of these sandwiches will separate. If desired, a flavored butter, such as honey butter, pimiento butter, etc., may be used.

HOT BUTTER FUDGE SAUCE.

2½ cups sugar.
2 tablespoons butter.
Dash of salt.
1¾ cups water.
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Melt the chocolate, stir in the sugar and water, add the butter and salt, and cook until the mixture is syrupy [about 7 minutes]. Add the vanilla. This may be served at once, hot, over simple butter cake, ice cream, or ice box puddings. It is just as good served cold. It may be kept for several weeks in the refrigerator in a tightly closed jar and reheated in the double boiler before serving.

LEADERS SPLIT OVER CHOICE OF ACTING MAYOR

Law Vague; Hark Back to Opinion of 1893.

The death of Mayor Cermak has plunged Chicago into uncertainty and confusion over who will serve as acting mayor until a special election can be held. Political leaders and leading citizens who canvassed the situation voiced two opposing conclusions.

One side held that the city council should elect one of its members to act as mayor pro tem. until the special election, which possibly will be in June at the time of the judicial elections.

The other side argued that the Cermak policies would meet with least interference if the city should be run during the interim by the four men into whose hands Mayor Cermak placed management of affairs when he departed for Florida. The four are William H. Sexton, corporation counsel; Ald. Henry Sonnenschein, the mayor's secretary; M. S. Szymczak, city controller, and Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works. They were designated to carry on by the late mayor on his deathbed at Miami the day after he was shot.

Many Potential Candidates.

Democrats—William H. Sexton, Clayton F. Smith, Col. A. A. Sprague, M. S. Szymczak, Edward J. Kelly, Ross A. Woodhull, William L. O'Connell, Judge E. K. Jarecki, Michael L. Igoe, Francis X. Busch, Ald. John S. Clark, Ald. James B. Bowler.

Republicans—George F. Harding, Thomas O. Wallace, James A. Kearns, Howard P. Savage, Ald. John A. Massen, Prof. Charles E. Merriam, Charles S. Deneen.

Leaders of various factions in the two parties have been looking the situation over ever since Mayor Cermak's condition first became critical, and there are indications that at the special election Chicago may be plunged into another tense mayoralty fight.

Democrats Seek Harmony.

Among leading Democrats the hope has been voiced that Gov. Horner, State's Attorney Courtney, County Clerk Sweitzer, and others of the old timers may manage to keep harmony within the party and to avoid factional breaks. Who will succeed Mayor Cermak as leader of the Democratic party is yet to be developed.

Gov. Horner has held conferences with other party leaders and the word is that the matter most discussed was the need of keeping the party harmonized and of seeking the election of a new mayor who will continue the Cermak policies of economy, retrenchment and lower taxes at the city hall, and the general fight against organized crime.

Advocates of an "interregnum" in which the city would be run by four city officers until a mayor is elected hold it would cause the least disturbance, both in politics and in governmental economies.

Reason for Uncertainty.

The uncertainty over procedure comes from the fact that the cities and villages act, which since 1875 has been the city's charter, contains no specific provision for selecting an acting mayor in Chicago where the unexpired term is a year or more. It simply calls for an election.

Those who urge election of an alderman as acting mayor by the city council use as precedent a legal opinion on which was based the election of George B. Swift by the city council following the assassination of Mayor Carter H. Harrison the elder, on Oct. 28, 1893. Like Mr. Cermak, Mr. Harrison was a World's Fair mayor.

After the Harrison assassination the council met on Nov. 4, 1893, and elected Swift, a Republican, by one vote. In the special election, the following Dec. 19, Swift was beaten by John P. Hopkins, Democrat.

1893 Opinion by Kraus.

The opinion of 1893 was written by Adolph Kraus, then corporation counsel, who went back to the old Chicago charter, discarded when the cities and villages act was adopted. It is now being widely quoted at the city hall. The city council has 30 Democrats and 20 Republicans, and if it decided to elect an alderman as pro tem. mayor the struggle is expected to lie between Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the finance committee, and Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], who was at Mayor Cermak's side when he was shot.

In his opinion 40 years ago Mr. Kraus warned the council that the matter of electing a pro tem mayor is so shrouded in legal vagueness that the council should, in the interim before the election, confine itself only to "urgent and necessary" measures.

ASSASSIN FACES ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR FATAL SHOT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., March 6.—[Special.]—With the death of Mayor Anton J. Cermak, Giuseppe Zangara, the assassin, is facing the electric chair. A prompt and quick trial is forecast.

Zangara, stunted and erratic Italian, 32 years old, is now confined under a sentence of eighty years of hard labor as a result of his attempt to kill President Elect Roosevelt here two weeks ago. A week after the shooting a short session before Judge E. C. Collins found him guilty on charges of attempting to kill the President elect and Miss Margaret Kruis, Russell Caldwell, and William Sinnott, three of the five who were accidentally hit by bullets intended for Mr. Roosevelt.

When questioned by police after his arrest Zangara said he was sorry he hit these bystanders, and equally sorry he missed the President elect.

"It's not my fault I shot other people," said the swarthy, squat alien. "I was shooting."

The murder trial will be as swift and as sure justice, according to local authorities.

Zangara has been in America since September, 1923. He said his mother is dead and his father is still living in Calabria, Italy. He gave his occupation as a bricklayer.

Cermak's Career Is Story of Immigrant Boy's Rise

The story of A. J. Cermak's life is the story of politics itself. Cermak deliberately chose that vocation as a means to his own advancement, and made no mistake in his choice. He played the game according to the rules, mastered it, and thus attained preëminent success.

During his early years in the rough and tumble game the ever aggressive Cermak and his opponents exchanged some hard blows. With him it was a constant struggle for patronage power and prestige, and his reputation may have suffered in the conflict. But when at length he attained the security of high office, with considerable wealth, his character grew mellow according to his friends, and the elements of true greatness were reflected in his deeds.

A lifetime in a ruthless game did not harden him, according to those who profess to have understood his nature. In the present economic crisis he showed himself a true humanitarian they say. There was no hint of hypocrisy, they maintain, in his zeal to find money to pay the teachers and help support the idle; in his preaching and practice of municipal economy and in his fight on crime.

The record of his deeds seems to support these claims of his sincerity. That record shows Cermak, as candidate for United States senator or mayor of Chicago, supporting the same principles he had espoused as a political stripling thirty years ago.

First Foreign Born Mayor.

Of the thirty-eight chief executives of Chicago's history he was the first of foreign birth. All the others were of Celtic or Anglo-Saxon origin. He came of the Slavic race. His record disclosing his strength and weaknesses, his triumphs and defeats is presented here.

Anton Joseph Cermak was born May 9, 1873, in the village of Kladno, some fifty miles from Prague, the ancient capital of Bohemia, at that time part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. He was the first born of Anton and Catherine Cermak, whose maiden name was Frank. The parents were Hussite Protestants.

The hills of that romantic country are clothed with forests and crowned with castles, but the meager fortunes of the Cermak family depended on the father's toil in the depths of the earth. Following the example of his forbears Anton Cermak spent his days digging in the coal pits beyond the village.

The son who was to become Chicago's mayor might have been doomed to the same pursuit except for a decision the parents made when he was a few months old. In quest of a fuller life they sailed for the new world and their son passed his first birthday in his mother's arms on Ellis Island almost in the shadow of the Statue of Liberty.

His Arrival in Chicago.

The couple arrived in Chicago to find this city still blighted by the panic of '73. Hard pressed for funds they tarried here only a few days before moving out to the Will county coal fields, where a mine in the village of Braidwood furnished the father the same hard livelihood he hoped he had quit forever in Bohemia.

Four other children came into the world. Tony, as the villagers called him, went to the public school and there met a young man who was to influence his whole life. The young man was a miner who, having lost his leg while working in the pits had educated himself and become the village schoolmaster. His name was George E. Brennan.

Tony spent six years under Brennan's tutelage before the needs of the growing family compelled him to strike out for himself. At the age of 16, with his belongings in a bandanna handkerchief, he trudged to Chicago, found a mill job paying $2 a week, and worked through the winter. But the scant pay left him nothing to send home and he returned to Braidwood. Brennan was still teaching school.

As soon as his age allowed, Cermak followed his father into the mines. There his capacity for leadership first asserted itself and, incidentally cost him his job. The mule drivers considered themselves underpaid at $1.50 a day. Finding Cermak aggressive and fluent by their standards, they nominated him to carry their demands for better pay to the pit boss, John Cherry. He did.

"Step into the cage," said Cherry, and the car lifted them to the surface.

"Step out," he said when they reached the top. "You've had your raise. Now you're fired."

Fired from Mine Second Time.

The disheartened Cermak walked away. His steps first turned toward the schoolhouse, but, remembering that his counselor, Brennan, had lately gone to Chicago, he went home to brood over his troubles. His father urged him to return to the mine and seek a job outside Cherry's province, which he did. When the superintendent, Zollar, learned of his previous dismissal, he was fired once more.

Cermak now decided to shake the soot of Braidwood from his feet forever, and set out once more for Chicago. He followed the path skirting the old drainage canal and ended his journey in the Lawndale district around 26th street. With this district his interests were to be identified for the rest of his life. His home stands there today at 2348 South Millard avenue.

He found work as a tow boy for the traction company. Each morning he straddled an old white horse and rode to the Blue Island viaduct, where he spent a ten hour day hitching to cars to pull them up the grade. His wage was sufficient to permit him to save and he embarked in business for himself, the dream of almost every immigrant.

Business Strides Made.

By present standards it was a humble business. He bought waste wood from the International Harvester plant to peddle among the neighbors. In the restaurant where he used to take his meals was a Bohemian girl, Mary Horejs, 17 years old, who was as lonely as himself. Within a year they were married and living in their own home, with the young peddler attending night school.

As he acquired knowledge of bookkeeping the business prospered. He began grading the wood and branching out. Within a few years he owned five teams, was hiring twenty more, and had forty men on his pay roll. He became director of a bank, helped organize a building and loan association and launched the real estate business knowns as Cermak & Serbant.

There were no more lonely nights for Cermak. He was in politics now and had an opportunity to advance his business interests. He became precinct captain, then secretary, and finally chairman of his ward organization. He was firmly entrenched at last and the parents, brothers and sisters in Braidwood came in to share the fruits of his industry.

In conferences with the Democratic party chiefs downtown Cermak's path once more crossed that of his former schoolmaster. Brennan had become a leader among the Irish as Cermak was among the Bohemians and, although indifferent to political office himself, was one of the most influential lieutenants of the big boss of the Democracy, Roger C. Sullivan.

In 1902 they sent Cermak to the state legislature. Amenable to party discipline, loyal to his chiefs and adroit in carrying out orders, he served four terms and emerged as floor leader. Meanwhile he was consolidating his strength at home by becoming secretary of the United Societies for Local Self-Government.

The United Societies were the liberals of their day and Cermak was their champion. Their fight was against state prohibition and the Sunday closing law. When the drys charged them with being a mere front for the brewing, distilling and saloon interests Cermak fought back with a demand that the income of the Anti-Saloon league be investigated. He declared his stand was for personal liberty.

Elected Alderman and Bailiff.

On this issue he ran for alderman and was elected. The fight went on until 1912, when he left the city council to run for Municipal court bailiff. Upon his election he provoked a storm by discharging from their posts sixty-seven Municipal court employés in defiance of the judges, who asserted theirs was the right to employ and discharge the court staff.

The judges couldn't stop Cermak. He appointed his own men and announced that so long as a Sunday closing ordinance was on the books he would see to its enforcement. The Republican chief of police, he charged, was closing the places of Democratic saloonkeepers, but allowing those of his own party to stay open.

At Cermak's bidding the deputy bailiffs sallied forth to enforce the closing ordinance. The judges soon had him in a tight fix from another quarter, however. At the instigation of several, charges were brought that the office was ridden with graft, that tips were necessary to get service of legal papers and that in instances it was impossible to get service at all. The attack included the Bailiffs' Benevolent association, which Cermak had organized for philanthropic purposes.

Finally Emerges Victorious.

In the end he beat them. Hearings were held at which the charges were pronounced unfounded. The judges bringing the charges termed the hearing a whitewash, but Cermak was vindicated on the record.

With the indorsement of the Municipal Voters' league he returned to the city council. The league had no approval for his stand on the liquor question, but it did admire his forthright position on economy and his determination to keep the budget balanced. On one occasion when city finances were low he boldly proposed a tax on the various professions. The physicians, being included among the proposed payers of the tax, roared their disapproval, but Cermak stood by his guns and told them that if their wives were held up or shot for lack of police protection they could blame themselves.

Defeated for sheriff, he ran for president of the county board. The deficit facing him on election was $2,020,000. A Democratic president with a Republican majority, he battled for retrenchment, forced the opposition into line by use of patronage and otherwise and placed the county on a paidup basis.

Runs County Board Nine Years.

Cermak ran the county board from 1922 to 1931. His régime saw the erection of the new Criminal court and county jail, construction of county trunk line highways, additions to the county hospital and acquisition of the forest preserves. The Citizens' committee brought charges that $1,000,000 had been wasted in acquiring the forests and proved that several middlemen had reaped enormous profits in the purchase of the land, but none of it was traced directly to the county board.

In 1928 he ran for the United States senate. With the dry element apparently in the ascendancy, he crusaded up and down the state for the liberal cause, drawing the reproaches of church folk for distributing bottle openers as campaign souvenirs, but proclaiming to every one his stand for repeal. He was defeated for the second time in his life.

In 1930, while still president of the county board, he plunged into the campaign for mayor. George Brennan was dead and Cermak had succeeded him as boss. The Republican mayor whose office he was seeking was the same with whom he had battled over the closing ordinance twenty years earlier.

Slashes Salaries and Budget.

In the campaign he was subjected to much personal abuse concerning his foreign birth. He wanted to retort in kind, but was restrained by his advisers. Swept to victory by a big majority, he redeemed his campaign pledges by reducing the corporate budget several million dollars, cutting salaries 21 per cent, and organizing squads to drive the hoodlums from the city.

It was his ambition to restore the city's name before the opening of A Century of Progress exposition. As host to the national convention of both parties and on a tour of Europe he spread his gospel of a new Chicago redeemed from racketeers.

Cermak possessed great physical courage. When the assassin's bullet struck him at Miami, he slumped in pain, but his eyes blazed unflinchingly and his jaw was firmly set as friends raised him to his feet and carried him to his car. He was stricken, but unafraid.

Strong in Physical Courage.

In appearance Cermak was broad shouldered and keen eyed, with an easy, genial manner. When crossed however, he could be dynamic in his wrath. His language was frequently ungrammatical, but its meaning grew clear enough as his thoughts flowed out from him.

When the President elect visited his hospital room to wish him well, the mayor's thoughts were all for the unpaid school teachers. And when Mr. Roosevelt grasped his hand in sympathy for his pain, Cermak responded with as lofty an expression of patriotism as has been heard, perhaps, in recent times. Purists might criticise his grammar, but none could find fault with his sentiment when he told the President elect: "I'm glad it was me instead of you."

MAYOR CERMAK TAKEN BY DEATH IN LONG FIGHT

These thirteen and Dr. Frederick Tice witnessed the passing of the man who climaxed a career marked by perseverance against all manner of handicaps by as great a fight against the relentless onsloughts of death as was ever waged by mortal being.

The word of the death was quickly passed to the waiting crowd of newspaper men. Immediately the large, rambling hospital was vibrant with activity. The clicking of seven telegraph sets in a large room set aside for a crew of special operators disturbed the peaceful night.

Heroic Words to Roosevelt.

In a few seconds word was being flashed to a waiting nation and the world that the struggle which millions had been watching was over.

Mayor Cermak had become a martyr to an assassin's gun and his heroic words to Mr. Roosevelt as he was being rushed to the hospital in the latter's arms on the afternoon of Feb. 15 will be written in history's pages. Those words were:

"I'm glad it was me instead of you."

Never was there a more courageous battle against death. The mayor fought on for days after the doctors had been seized by despair. His great heart, the heart that always had been physically weak, kept beating against overwhelming odds while a corps of physicians looked on in awe.

Stimulants Prolong Life.

Mayor Cermak was given all the aid that medical science could offer. He spent the last four days in an oxygen room which aided his laboring lungs. Blood transfusions helped replenish the weakened life stream. Powerful stimulants gave temporary vigor to his exhausted heart. Injections of a glucose fluid in his veins gave some nourishment to the wasted tissues when he was unable to swallow food or water. But these measures would have been futile without the coöperation of a mighty determination to live.

Death would have triumphed days ago if the mayor had not defied fate and willed to live. His spirit kept death from his bedside indefinitely, but yielded finally to the inevitable.

Buoyed by His Vitality.

It was not until about fifteen hours before death that the physicians in the case publicly admitted that the mayor was a dying man. Days before, they admitted, they had realized that only a miracle could save him, but they were buoyed up by the patient's astonishing vitality and mental strength and nursed a hope that he might somehow pull through. They continued to issue bulletins which declared that hope for his recovery might still be "reasonably considered."

But at noon Sunday they faced the issue frankly. A third blood transfusion was performed, but instead of producing the beneficial effects which two previous transfusions had caused, the reaction of the patient was unfavorable. He was very near death immediately after the transfusion, but pulled himself back from the portals of death to keep himself alive by sheer will power for a few more precious hours.

An evening bulletin at that time stated that his condition, though critical was not as bad as it had been a few hours before.

"His breathing is labored," the bulletin stated. "He now is sleeping. His pulse is 128. We hope that he may show definite improvement by morning, but this cannot be assured."

An hour later, however, the last great effort had failed and the patient began slipping rapidly. Members of his family were hastily summoned. Even in the coma his eyes remained partly open. At times he stirred or lifted a hand to his face. His square, rugged countenance was drawn and thin from the pain and stress of the long struggle. His gray hair had become white during his illness. The pallor of approaching death had touched the lined face.

Three Daughters Kiss Him.

Into the dimly lit oxygen room went the three daughters. They bent over him and kissed him. For a moment the mayor seemed as if about to speak. His lips moved, but no word came from them.

Mrs. Graham fainted and was carried from the room. She was revived only to burst into hysterical sobs. The other two daughters spoke to their father.

"It's Helen, dad," said Mrs. Kenlay. Mrs. Jirka also spoke her name.

The gaze of the dying man wavered for an instant. He made an effort to speak. They stooped low to catch his words.

"Vivian," he whispered. It was the name of his favorite grandchild, 15 years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graham. She was at home in the Jirka residence on Miami Beach and was immediately sent for.

Meanwhile the sons-in-law entered the oxygen room and stood looking for a moment at the man who meant so much to them, who had helped elevate them to the positions they now hold, and for whom they had conceived a great affection. They emerged saddened.

"He's very low," said Mr. Graham. "In his last moments, I fear."

The Rev. Sidney Morrison, pastor of St. Bartholomew's Roman Catholic church, also entered the room. He laid a hand on the mayor's forehead and murmured a blessing. Then he hung a large gold crucifix over the bed and departed. He had come merely as a personal friend of the mayor, he explained. The mayor was not of the Roman Catholic faith.

Leaves Bedside Weeping.

Then Vivian arrived and was immediately taken into the room. She laid her hand on her grandfather's head and said: "This is Vivian, granddaddy"; but it was too late. He did not recognize her and she left the room, weeping, a few moments later.

At 12:30 a. m. the doctors issued a bulletin which stated:

"Mayor Cermak is rapidly failing. He is in a comatose state without obvious suffering. It is unlikely that he will live more than a few hours."

An hour later the dying man was wheeled on his bed out of the oxygen room and placed in the sickroom where he spent most of his days since the shooting. The physicians said it was futile to keep supplying him the oxygenated air at that late hour. Dr. Tice predicted that the end would come about 3 a. m.

Heart Rate Increases.

From then on it merely was a matter of waiting. At 2:30 a. m. another bulletin declared: "Mayor Cermak is slowly losing ground. He is now in a coma. The heart rate has increased and the pulse has become weaker."

At 4:15 a. m. another terse bulletin was issued. "Mayor Cermak's pulse is getting weaker and his respiration shallower," it read.

COUNCIL WILL HOLD MEETING TO PLAN CERMAK'S FUNERAL

Shortly after news of the death of Mayor Cermak was received here, Ald. Henry Sonnenschein announced that a special meeting of the city council would be called for Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning to make arrangements for the funeral.

"After the funeral another special meeting of the council will be called to decide what measures are to be taken for the election or appointment of a successor to Mayor Cermak."

At present the executive affairs of the city are in the hands of four of the dead mayor's cabinet.

All last night and this morning—until Mayor Cermak died—city officials and friends kept a vigil at the city hall, being in almost constant telephonic communication with the Miami hospital where the mayor passed away. Shortly before 2 a. m. Dr. Frank Jirka, a son-in-law, told Ald. Toman that "the end is expected momentarily."

Ald. Sonnenschein, probably the official who was closest to Mayor Cermak, talked with Ald. Bowler, who was with the mayor when the latter was shot and who has remained with him continuously. Ald. Bowler's message foretold the end.

Among those at the city hall vigil were Moe Rosenberg, County Commissioner Frank Kasper, Sanitary District Trustee Paul V. Collanni, Ald. Thomas Doyle, Benjamin F. Lindheimer, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission; Edward Denemark, superintendent of the Bridewell; Joseph Gill, clerk of the Municipal court; Ald. Joseph C. Ross, Martin J. O'Brien, Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court; Ald. Ald. Jacob M. Arvey, Ald. Toman and Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton.

WILMETTE YOUTH KILLED AS AUTO GOES INTO DITCH

Arno von Reinsperg, 23 years old, 728 Laurel avenue, Wilmette, was killed early yesterday when he lost control of an automobile and it went into a ditch in Dundee road, near Northbrook. He was a son of the late Hans von Reinsperg, former village trustee of Wilmette and a well known Chicago attorney. Arnold Johnson, 735 10th street, Wilmette, who was riding with Von Reinsperg, was slightly hurt.

Von Reinsperg's death raised the Cook county motor toll in 1933 to 141.

Four persons were injured last night in a collision between an automobile and a taxicab at 119th street and Ashland avenue. They were Joseph Menn Jr., 143 West 115th street, the cab driver; Peter Beemsterboer, 11423 Indiana avenue, his passenger, who is a teacher, and Carl W. Fries, 11129 Longwood drive, and his wife, Catherine. They were taken to the Roseland Community hospital.

Woman Beaten to Death; Arrest Drunken Husband

Mrs. Neva McDermott, 38 years old, 6753 Wentworth avenue, was found beaten to death in her apartment last night by police who had responded to calls from neighbors that a fight was in progress there. Sergt. George Link arrested her husband, Timothy, 40 years old, a machinist, who sought to flee through the rear door as the police arrived. He was intoxicated and unable to make a coherent statement. Neighbors said he had been drinking heavily for a week.

Business As Usual In Iowa

Retailers and wholesalers—and most important of all, the buying public—are continuing business as usual in Iowa in spite of the bank holiday.

There is no hysteria in Iowa, simply good humored acceptance of the situation with buying of merchandise almost as active as before.

The Des Moines Register and Tribune actually has a gain in retail advertising today, March 6. Unquestionably it contains a higher degree of reader interest than ever.

Iowa continues to be a good field in which to go after business.

BLACKHAWKS LOSE, 2-1; PLAYOFF HOPES FADE

CUBS RALLY TO WIN 2D IN ROW FROM GIANTS, 3-2

Warneke and Bush Effective.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Avalon, Cal., March 5.—The Cubs this afternoon put on one of those August, 1932, ninth inning specials against the New York Giants to make a sweep of the two game William Wrigley Jr. memorial series on this island. The score was Cubs, 3; Giants, 2, and two of the Chicago tallies were raced across in the final inning.

MARK KOENIG.

In marked contrast with yesterday's 10 to 2 affair, today's game was a right scientific contest. There was good pitching on both sides and much verve in all departments except on one occasion in the eighth inning when Frank Demaree put the Giants in front with a two base error which placed Richards on third with none out. Richards scored on James' double and to those not familiar with the Cub technique in vogue since the third of last August, it looked like a Gotham triumph.

At the outset of the ninth Manager Grimm flashed the win signal to Zack Taylor, leadoff man against Glenn Spencer. Zack couldn't get one to smack, but walked and stopped at second on Koenig's single to center. Vince Barton batted for Newsom and lined a hot one to right which scored Zack with the tying run and put Koenig on third. Del Young knocked a fly to Leiber and school was out when Koenig dashed home while the ball bounced merrily to the grandstand.

Cubs First to Score.

The Cubs were the first to score. Stephenson led off the second with a single to center, took second on H. Taylor's single to right, went to third while H. Taylor and Hartnett were going down in a double play and scored on Koenig's single to center. Lon Warneke fanned.

The Giants tied the score in the third, victimizing the redoubtable Warneke, who, as you may have heard before now, led the National league last season in earned runs and the most games won.

Lon retired the first six batsmen in order, but Vergez nicked him for a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Vergez counted on Mancuso's single to center, after which Hubbell hit into a double play.

Bush Pitches Effectively.

Bush followed with three good innings and Fitzsimmons pitched a couple of scoreless innings. Bush allowed only one hit, a single by Mancuso with two out in the fifth. Fitzsimmons allowed three hits but two of them were executed with two down and the effort came to naught.

Both lineups had a strong Yannigan flavor when the Giants took the lead in the eighth, at the expense of Buck Newsom. Richards singled to center and proceeded to third when the ball bounced past Demaree. Smith fanned, but James looped one over McCarron's head for a double, scoring Richards for the 2 to 1 lead.

There will be no camp game tomorrow but the last two Regulars-Yannigan contests on Catalina this year will be played Tuesday and Wednesday.

CHICAGO SEXTET HELD SCORELESS TILL 3D PERIOD

Conacher, Gracie Lead Toronto.

Representation in the Stanley cup playoffs slipped a little farther away from Chicago last night when the Blackhawks were defeated, 2 to 1, by the Toronto Maple Leafs in a National Hockey league game at the Stadium. The defeat, coming with Boston's 3 to 1 triumph over the New York Rangers, left the Hawks six points behind the Bruins, who are in third place, the position the Hawks must gain to qualify for the championship series.

JOHNNY GOTTSELIG.

Last night's result was the most disappointing to the surprising turnout of 7,000. The Hawks had not been exactly successful in their season's series against the world champions, having played a tie and won once in four starts, but it had been expected that Toronto's 4 to 2 victory over Montreal Saturday night and the subsequent train ride would whittle Conacher, Gracie, and Clancy down to a respectable size.

Two Perfect Plays—Two Goals.

Conacher and Gracie, however, were sufficiently rested to execute two perfect plays, each of which produced a score before Gottselig was able to beat Goalie Chabot for Chicago's lone goal in the third period. Clancy started Gracie's goal with a beautiful pass in the first period.

Although play was fast and spirited throughout the first period, there was no evidence of goal production until the Leafs, without warning or apparent effort, drove in a marker in the nineteenth minute. Clancy took the puck away from a nest of Hawks in his blue line, skated down midrink to the Chicago defense, and passed out to Gracie along the left boards.

Gracie picked up the bullet pass flawlessly, added some impetus to it, and drove it past Gardiner into the corner of the cage. The score was accomplished with such dispatch and finesse that the gleam of the red light was the Hawks' only proof they had been placed in arrears.

Conacher Makes it 2-0.

The second period was uneventful until the eighth minute when Conacher came out from behind his own blue line with the puck and skated down to the Blackhawks' net with Toronto's goal No. 2. Conacher went sliding down the boards on the left side of the rink, outsped the Hawk defense and continued on around the fence behind the goal, where Gardiner was waiting for him. The Hawk goalie made a lunge to cover up the far corner of the net, but as Conacher came around he backhanded the puck between Gardiner's extended chin and the corner of the cage for the score.

This enlivened play, so much so in fact that Abel skated down with the puck and wound up in a headlock with Conacher. There was a free for all as the players from both sides rushed in, but it later developed all the flying sticks and fists were just an effort on the part of gentlemanly teammates to separate the two combatants: Abel and Conacher were given major penalties. They had no more left the ice than Day was sent off for tripping, giving the Hawks a man advantage. Two miraculous stops by Chabot prevented the Hawks from scoring.

Hawks Go to Work.

The Hawks apparently had been saving all their hockey for the third period. They went to work with a vengeance immediately after the face-off, and four minutes and 30 seconds of desperate play netted them a goal. Romnes took the puck down for one of the innumerable scrimmages in the mouth of the Toronto goal and passed to March, whose shot from in close dropped Chabot to the ice. While the goalie was clutching for the puck, Gottselig flipped it in.

With their margin cut to one goal, the Leafs showed more of a tendency to attack, a circumstance which lessened the Hawks' chances to score and eliminated much of the hair raising scrimmage within the Leafs' blue line. Considerable golfing of the puck also abetted Toronto's defense of the winning goal.

WHAT DO SOX DO ON DAY OFF? WHY, SEE A BALL GAME!

Groom Durham, Gregory as Regular Pitchers.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 5.—The White Sox took today's training lesson sitting down. The workout consisted of nothing more strenuous than a steamer ride to Catalina island, where they observed the Cubs and Giants in combat in the second of the William Wrigley memorial games. The steamer jaunt was a real frolic in times such as these because it cost nothing. The expense was borne by William Veeck, the Cub president, who welcomed the opportunity to show off his palatial training grounds to an American league team.

The Comiskey employés were permitted to abandon practice for the day because Manager Lew Fonseca didn't think work was necessary. His charges have made so much progress in six days of muscle stretching that the manager himself has been surprised. He also figured a 24 hour vacation would be in the nature of a reward for the spirit with which the players have gone about their chores. There are none of the chronic grunters such as have disturbed the White Sox affairs for the last ten years.

Gregory O. K., Says Lyons.

It is a bit early to pass judgment on the fresh crop of pitchers, but a few more days will see them in shape. When that stage is reached Fonseca will be giving plenty of attention to Ed Durham, taken in trade from the Red Sox. He's a slim lad, but that isn't held against him. Fonseca saw him pitch some swell innings against the White Sox last year, and marked him for a comer. The boss hopes to groom Durham for a regular starting rôle.

Another being figured for regular assignments is Paul Gregory, who was with the team last year. He was worked occasionally so that he would learn something. In a few spots he pitched phenomenal ball. He was good enough to pick up credit for five victories.

Ted Lyons, who should know a pitcher when he sees one, predicts a big future for the youngster. Gregory is almost a replica of Lyons in his pitching actions, probably as the result of close observation. Lyons claims that his 24 year old prodigy has as good a curve ball as any batter ever looked at.

If Durham and Gregory should become regulars, the Sox would cause more trouble in the league than anybody now suspects. Lyons is almost a cinch to have a big year, based on the improved batting power of the team. Chad Kimsey is figured on to turn in a lot of excellent rescue jobs. Sam Jones will be able to give a good account of himself about once a week.

Here's a Murderers' Row.

Then there is Milt Gaston, who lost many low score games last season, and Vic Frasier, who last year was the victim of malaria. Frasier expects to be as good as he was in 1931, when he was the youthful sensation of the league.

Outside of his pitchers, Fonseca is as contented as a boy with a new mechanical toy. He likes to talk about the Sox's high powered batting attack, in which he, Al Simmons, Jimmy Dykes, Mule Haas and possibly Red Kress are the prospective ringleaders. Kress is a cinch to be in right field if he does much hitting in the spring exhibitions with the Cubs, Giants and Pirates. If he doesn't hit, the job will rest between Elias Funk and Evar Swanson. Fonseca would like to have Funk in there regularly because the little fellow is an ideal leadoff man and a speedy base runner, but there is doubt about his hitting ability.

The task of loafing around the bench to take care of utility assignments in the infield probably will go to Hal Rhyne, unless Joe Chamberlin, who hasn't shown up yet, should prove a wizard. Rhyne has been through the mill in both majors. He has an AA rating on defense, but is woefully weak at bat. Despite his deficiency he will be worth keeping for use at short when Luke Appling goes into one of his fielding tailspins.

Golden Gloves Slogan Is Say It with Socks; Eddie Ward Does His Sparring in the Dark 32 Battle Wednesday; List Like Roll Call of Nations.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

That one time popular song about the Portuguese, the Argentines, and Greeks list about the only nationalities not entered in the finals of the 1933 Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament, which will be held Wednesday night at the Chicago Stadium. None of the 32 young fighting Americans, who are seeking diamond studded Golden Gloves and the recognition and honor that accompanies these awards, has listed himself as Portuguese, Argentine, or Greek.

WALTER MATTHYS

Neither is there a Japanese lad in the semi-finals, although one entered Chicago's south section trials. Golden Gloves championships this year will be distributed among the Norwegians, Swedes, Irish, Germans, Italians, English, Negroes, Ukrainians, Bohemians, Poles, Lithuanians, Belgians, Jews, and a scattering of boys who have so many racial antecedents they cannot be hyphenated and consequently are plain American.

They All Have Courage.

The melting pot theory of American social structure never has been exemplified better. And once again Golden Gloves has pointed out that courage is common to all nationalities and races, no matter how the word may be spelled or pronounced.

However, these 32 boys speak a common language. They say it with socks, and as far as we know the Greeks, who were mighty wrestlers and throwers of the discus, had no word for it. Eight of these 32 amateurs will win championships Wednesday night. Already they've proved their ability, endurance, and fortitude. But the last tests are most severe.

Checks Good for Tickets.

Tickets may be purchased by check as well as cash. For five years boxing fans have supported Golden Gloves and THE TRIBUNE now is prepared to arrange for purchase of tickets by check regardless of bank holidays or moratoria.

If your credit is established with THE TRIBUNE you may purchase any number of tickets by check. If not, each individual may offer his personal check for two tickets if he will submit one of his canceled checks dated since Feb. 1. No mail orders will be accepted. Turn in your check in payment for Golden Gloves tickets with one of your canceled checks at THE TRIBUNE Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn, or Room 530 Tribune Tower.

Offices Open 9 to 6.

The canceled check will be returned to you by the Golden Gloves Ticket Manager after the signatures on both checks have been compared. Ticket offices will be open from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m. today, tomorrow, and Wednesday.

Starting at 8 o'clock, the schedule of 10 semi-final bouts will be run off.

$50,000 Still Small Change to Babe Ruth

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 5.—[Special.]—Bank moratoriums may temporarily paralyze the money situation in New York and country over, but they will not affect Babe Ruth's appraisal of his value to the Yankee ball club, or his negotiations with Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the world's champions. Ruth today declared emphatically that he had no intention of accepting the $50,000 offered him for the season of 1933. Nor has Mrs. Ruth any intention of permitting The Babe to accept the terms.

Ruth collected $75,000 last season and was offered a contract for $50,000 this year, the depression and a general campaign of retrenchment by the ball clubs of the major leagues being advanced as the reason for the one-third cut.

A Couple of "No's."

"Have you an intention of signing a contract for next season for $50,000 " Ruth was asked.

"We thought that in view of existing conditions and, particularly, the money situation that has developed since you returned your contract, you would revise your plans and perhaps accept the $25,000 cut," it was suggested.

Expects Ruppert to See Light.

"Hell, no," came back the Babe. "I am still prepared to take a 10 or even 15 per cent cut, but that's as far as I intend to go. The situation, I think, will be easily and satisfactorily adjusted when Col. Ruppert gets here. We never have any trouble coming to terms, and I don't see why we should have any now.

"This money situation isn't a permanent thing. Col. Ruppert will be able to sign checks after a few days, and will be able to continue writing and signing them for a long time after this condition is forgotten. He knows what I am worth to the club and he knows what I think I am worth to him."

Cash or Check

Bank holidays need not interfere with your plans to see the finals of the Golden Gloves tournament Wednesday night. You may buy two tickets by check, provided you bring a canceled check written in February to show you have a bank account. Persons whose credit has been established with The Tribune will be permitted to purchase an unlimited quantity.

Ticket offices are open from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. in Room 530, Tribune Tower, and from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m. at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn.

The prices to boxing's greatest show are $2.20, $1.50, and 75 cents.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Persons who had occasion to visit the twelfth floor of the Medinah Athletic club during the last few nights must have been filled with curiosity upon witnessing the strange gesticulations of the porter at work on that floor.

EDWARD WARD.

Sometimes this strange nocturnal battle would continue minutes at a time, but always it ended in the same characteristic pose with the porter's right hand lifted high into the air.

Mystery Is Solved.

Fear of making a visit to the twelfth floor of the Medinah Athletic club, which might entail a possible encounter with this fighting ghost of the night, may now be dispelled.

The mystery has been solved.

The porter is Edward Ward, the only Negro boy left in the struggle for THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves. He is on the job at the Medinah from 10 o'clock at night until 7 o'clock the next morning.

As he went about his duties he couldn't keep his mind off his impending combats in the lightweight division at the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night.

So he again and again dropped his mop stick and scrub bucket to assume a fighting pose. Then would come the minutes of shadow boxing which would end only when he knocked his absent foe into the resin dust.

Ward, who is 23 years old, was born in Nashville, Tenn., but came to Chicago when quite a youngster. The first job he found here was that of a coal heaver which he held for three years, during which time he became interested in boxing.

Ward Gets the Job.

Ray Kestaloot, athletic director at the Medinah A. C., was arranging some amateur bouts for the members of his club. He matched Ward with Earl Watson, another dusky lightweight. The winner of the scrap was to get the porter's job—then vacant—at the big Michigan avenue club.

Well, now you know who the porter is so you must know who was the victor.

So keen has Ward been to perfect his fighting and so great has been the appeal of a diamond studded glove that many times lately during the long vigil of the night he would have welcomed an encounter with a good, tough prowler.

$5.85 ONLY CASH IN BROOKLYN'S TRAINING CAMP

Miami, Fla., March 5.—[Special.]—The Brooklyn Dodgers, training here in this winter playground, today found their official till totaled exactly $5.85 in cash. Of this amount Treasurer Joseph Gilleaudeau possessed $3 and the balance was in the wallet of Road Secretary John Gorman.

The players themselves are broke. Most of them are dependent on salary advances, as they receive no pay checks until April 15. Manager Max Carey shot 18 holes of golf on the Miami-Biltmore course today and paid off his caddy with an autographed baseball.

Akron Wins Pro League Basketball Title, 27-24

Toledo, O., March 5.—(AP)—Akron captured the National Professional Basketball league championship here today by winning its third straight game from Toledo, 27 to 24.

BIG 10 SEASON TO END TONIGHT WITH 3 GAMES

Ohio State Defends Lead at Indiana.

The basketball race in the Western conference comes to a conclusion tonight in a three game program which serves only to make final adjustments in the 1933 records. Ohio State, at Bloomington to meet Indiana, has clinched a tie for the championship but must defeat the Hoosiers to prevent Northwestern from sharing first place.

Ohio State has played team basketball throughout the season. Starting with three victories on their home court, the Buckeyes then staggered a bit on their road trips. Despite their uncertainty, which caused many to predict a collapse, the Buckeyes eked out one and two point victories, which after all, count as much as a top heavy triumph.

N. U. Sure of Second.

Northwestern, 1931 champion and runnerup to Purdue last year, is certain of second place, having finished its season with ten victories and two defeats. Northwestern got away inauspiciously, losing to Illinois by two points. The Wildcats then trailed along licking other rivals and hoping some one would beat Ohio, since Northwestern wouldn't have that opportunity because of the rotating schedule.

Northwestern looked to Purdue and Iowa to help it catch up. Purdue nearly turned the trick at Columbus, but was defeated by one point. Then came the Iowa-Ohio State series which began at Columbus and was concluded five days later at Iowa City. Ohio State won the opener, while Northwestern at Lafayette on the same night lost by two points to Purdue. This ruined the Wildcats' chances apparently, but Iowa cut down Ohio's lead to one game by taking the contest at Iowa City.

Reiff High with 167.

Northwestern finished its schedule Saturday night by scoring its second victory over Minnesota, 38 to 29. Joe Reiff, Northwestern's captain, accounted for 20 points, six field goals and eight free throws, to break the all time conference individual scoring record established last year by Johnny Wooden of Purdue. Wooden's record was 154 points, and Reiff now has moved that mark to 167 points.

In his sophomore year, 1931, Reiff led the conference in scoring. He finished second last year. He has been one of the principal reasons why the Wildcats won the championship in 1931, finished second last year and will finish second or tie for first this year.

Reiff's record this year is due in part to his scoring sprees against Chicago. In two games Reiff scored 49 points, but a comparison of his offensive ability in the other games shows that while he might not have beaten Wooden's mark without his high runs against Chicago, he would have come very close. Exclusive of the Chicago games, Reiff averaged 11.8 points a game. His average for the complete schedule of 12 games is 13.9 points.

Illini Good at Home.

Iowa concluded its schedule Saturday night, losing to Illinois by the surprisingly large score of 44 to 16. Yet, Illinois winds up with a percentage of .500 for the season. The Illini were fairly consistent in that they played best at home, as most teams do for that matter, but their tendency to foul hurt their chances in several

Suspend Racing at Fair Grounds and Agua Caliente

New Orleans, La., March 5.—(AP)—The Crescent City Jockey club announced today it had called off its racing program at the Fair Grounds tomorrow because of the "closing of the banks and the subsequent paralysis of all business."

"With the closing of the banks and the subsequent paralysis of all business, the Crescent City Jockey club considers it inadvisable to race on Monday and has declared the card off for that day.

"This is only a temporary condition and the track will reopen immediately upon the clearing of the banking situation. In the meantime, the association is taking care of its horsemen by cashing their checks for needed supplies out of money held at the track for the conduct of the mutuels."

AGUA CALIENTE CLOSES.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, March 5.—(AP)—The Agua Caliente Jockey club suspended indefinitely its 80 day race meeting after completion of racing today as a result of money shortage.

Joseph M. Schenck, Hollywood motion picture producer and president of the Agua Caliente Jockey club, said he hoped to resume the meeting the latter part of this week.

If it is possible to reopen the track on Friday, as Schenck said he hoped it would be, none of the major stake races will be affected.

Despite a fairly large crowd of approximately 10,000, the pari-mutuel machines handled under $30,000 today.

Detroit Beats Ottawa, 2-0; Retains Lead

Detroit, Mich., March 5.—(AP)—Detroit's Red Wings, working hard to retain the American division lead, shut out the Ottawa Senators, 2 to 0, here tonight in a National league hockey match before 8,000.

Ebbie Goodfellow, Detroit wingman who has been out several weeks due to injuries, got credit for both goals. He took a perfect pass from Gallagher to score in the first period. He drove the puck at Goalie Bill Beveridge of the Senators in the final period. Burke, Ottawa defense man, completing the score by accidentally carrying the puck in as he tried to check him.

Vic Malecki	6,448
Dick Weinsberg	6,419
Bill Wernicke	6,385

32 C. Y. O. Teams Reach 3d Round of Tournament

Sixteen light and sixteen heavy C. Y. O. teams qualified for the third round of the Catholic Youth Organization Basketball league elimination tournament by winning in last night's play.

Last year's champions, Queen of Heaven in the heavyweight division and Sacred Heart in the light, advanced into the third round with victories over St. Hyacinth and St. Genevieve, respectively. Other favorites that came through were Our Lady of Sorrows lights and St. Joseph's heavies.

Jennings Plays Davison in Net Exhibition Tonight

Three Games Tonight to End Big 10 Season

The Minnesota team played its final game against Northwestern and now holds last place with one victory and 11 defeats. That victory was over Illinois. Many other of its games were closely fought. Dissension early in the season and lack of condition by some of the star performers kept the Gophers from reaching their peak.

Chicago probably will join Minnesota in last place after tonight's game with Wisconsin at the Midway. Chicago sprang the surprise of the season by defeating Indiana. One or two other games were presentable, but in the main the Maroons were completely outclassed.

Purdue at Michigan.

The best game tonight, in all probability, will be between Michigan and Purdue at Ann Arbor. If Michigan wins it will tie with Iowa for third place, while if Purdue wins it will join Michigan in a tie for fourth place. Purdue was the defending champion, but loss of Eddy before the season by injury and graduation of Kellar left the Boilermakers without a consistent offensive man. Their defense was erratic in several games. Purdue's double defeats by Iowa and Ohio State, neither of which played Northwestern, were largely responsible for its lowly position. Northwestern and Purdue divided their series.

Indiana pulled Michigan down a bit Saturday night by hitting a long shot in the final seconds to win, 31 to 30. This may indicate that Indiana is capable of beating Ohio State if given the right kind of breaks. If Indiana wins it will tie Illinois and possibly Purdue for the season. If beaten, Indiana will have sole possession of seventh place.

Campers! Here's Ideal Spot to Pitch a Tent

BY BOB BECKER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Big Cypress Swamp, Fla.—March 5.—This is the only town down here in the southwestern corner of Florida. It extends north and east of the little town of Everglades. Fort Myers is northwest of the swamp. The flat, desolate prairies of the everglades are to the east. Waste and water, the very essence of dreariness and isolation, impenetrable in the rainy season except to a man on foot or with an oxen team, this great cypress swamp is the home to the bulk of the Seminole Indians. One cannot know or appreciate the Seminoles, their life and traits until he gets this background of the Big Cypress Swamp in mind.

We now are encamped in the land of the Seminoles. Our tent is pitched nearly 35 miles below Immokolee. This sleepy, little town consists of a couple of stores, a hotel, a filling station, boarding house, depot, a few scattered houses and an Indian camp beyond the railroad. A northern camper hardly could appreciate the site of our tent tonight as it stands in the lonely Lard Can strand [a section of the Big Cypress Swamp] without getting a look at the 20 miles between Immokolee and the camp site. Over this distance roads are that in name only in this secluded region.

After leaving Immokolee to enter the home of the Seminoles you are in a "desert" of primitive wilderness surrounded by smooth highways, pleasure resorts, and automobiles. In this vast area of everglades, swamp, and cypress and pine woods where the Seminoles make their thatched huts and lead their secluded, primitive life, there are no real highways. You lend your light car and plunging into the swamp and prairie country, you hope for the best.

Fortunately there has been little rain so we have every expectation of negotiating any part of Big Cypress swamp and the flat saw grass prairies of the everglades in a small car. But Okaloacoochee slough still stands as a menace. The Big Cypress represents desolation, depressing loneliness. But the Okaloacoochee stands for despair to the fellow in a car.

W. Stanley Hanson, a friend and student of the Seminoles for many years, a member of the Seminole council and well known authority on this tribe, describes the Okaloacoochee as "a nice little bog only 60 miles long." Hanson and his close Seminole friend, Johnny Cypress, a husky good natured chap about 32 years old, are our camp mates on this trip.

PAUL RUNYAN GETS 266 TO WIN IN FLORIDA GOLF

Miami, Fla., March 5.—(AP)—Paul Runyan, co-winner ten days ago of the $5,000 Miami international four ball matches, swept par aside for the fourth successive time today and took a brilliant 69—64—65—68—266 and $1,000 first money in the $5,000 Florida year round club open golf tournament. He defeated his nearest opponent by 10 strokes.

Runyan today tied the 133 for 36 holes that yesterday placed him at the head of nearly 100 professionals and amateurs seeking top honors in the tournament sponsored by Henry L. Doherty, public utilities magnate.

Ten strokes behind Runyan was Charlie Guest, youngster from Deal, N. J., who scored a 276 for his 72 holes of play with six inch cups, in their first use in major golf tournaments. He won $750.

A quartet tied in third place with 278 and took $506.25 each as prize money. They were Al Espinosa of Akron, O., Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia, Walter Hagen of Detroit, and Olin Dutra of Santa Monica, Cal.

Behind them were Willie MacFarlane of Tuckahoe, N. Y., with 279; Gene Sarazen of Miami, sponsor of the six inch cup idea, with 281, and Mike Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., with 282.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

[Lightweight.]
Joliet, 33; De La Salle, 23.
[Heavyweight.]
De La Salle, 30; Joliet, 26.

Arrangements for the semi-final and final contests for the Chicago Public High School league lightweight and heavyweight basketball championships will be made today at a meeting of officials and coaches in the offices of A. H. Pritzlaff, director of physical education, in the Builders' building.

The quarter-final round of games was completed Saturday. Wendell Phillips, last year's lightweight champion, and Crane Tech, defending heavyweight, title holder, were eliminated, Phillips by Fenger of the south section and Crane Tech by Lane Tech, north section representative.

Five Playoffs in Catholic League.

The teams which have survived sectional play and the quarter-final round in the heavyweight division are Bowen, south section; Parker, south section; Lane Tech, north section, and Lake View, north section. In the lightweight division the semi-finalists are Austin, west section; Roosevelt, north section; Fenger, south section, and Bowen, south section.

There will be five playoffs for sectional honors in the Chicago Catholic High School league this week, two in the heavyweight division and three in the lightweight. These winners must be determined by Friday, when an elimination series will open for the league championships. The dates and sites of these playoffs have not been selected.

Heavies Play at Loyola.

The De La Salle of Chicago heavyweight team went into a three way tie for second place in the south section of the Catholic High school league yesterday by defeating De La Salle of Joliet, 30 to 26. The Chicago quintet shares second place with Mount Carmel and St. Rita, each with four victories and four defeats. Joliet's lightweights evened matters by defeating De La Salle, 33 to 23.

The heavyweight qualifiers will play at Loyola university gymnasium Friday, while the lightweight contests are scheduled on De La Salle's court Saturday. Winners and runners-up in each of the three sections of the league are eligible for the competition.

DE BARRYS TOTAL 3,531 IN CLASSIC BOWLING LEAGUE

The De Barry Insurance team of the Classic Bowling league last night totaled 3,531 in a match against the Baby Ruths, taking two games. Bill Lenzen was high with 761. The S. & L. Motors won two games from Lorenz Knitting, the league leaders. Scores:

YOUNG BROTHER OF FERRELLS IS FOUND WOUNDED

Greensboro, N. C., March 5.—(AP)—Ewell Ferrell, 20 year old brother of Wesley and Rick Ferrell, major league baseball players, was brought to Clinic hospital here tonight suffering from a bullet wound in the head.

Marvin Ferrell, a brother, said he heard a shot in his home and found Ewell on the floor wounded in an adjoining room. The shot was fired from a .22 caliber revolver.

The Ferrells live near Guilford college and Ewell plays on the Guilford High school baseball team. Wesley is a pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, Rick a catcher for the St. Louis Browns.

BLAKNEY WINS WEEKLY SHOOT AT GLEN VIEW

J. H. Blakney won the feature event at the weekly shoot held at the Glen View club traps yesterday. His card of 92 plus a handicap of 5 was three better than that of his closest rival. Cold weather and high wind prevented good scores. The protection shoot was won by M. F. Swaney and Glen Smith by one bird. High gunners were:

DE PAUL FIVE MEETS DETROIT HERE TONIGHT

De Paul university will conclude its basketball season tonight against Detroit university at De Paul. The Titans defeated De Paul, 35 to 24, at Detroit last week.

In that contest De Paul had piled up a 21 to 13 lead in the second half, when Jim Gorsky, its star forward and leading scorer, injured his ankle.

Coach Jim Kelly was uncertain about whether Gorsky would be able to play against Detroit tonight. If his ankle permits he will perform at one of the forward positions in place of either Phil Rimkus or Bill Sand. De Paul has won 12 of its 15 games.

BASEBALL LEAGUE MEETS.

GOVERNMENT OF CHINA PERILED BY JEHOL COLLAPSE

Japanese Drive Looms in Peiping-Tientsin Area.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, March 5.—The concentration of approximately 40 Japanese warships and naval planes along the Chinese coast at the mouth of the Yangtze river and the occupation of Jehol province have shaken the foundations of the national goverament at Nanking. Lo Wen-kan, foreign minister, and Lieu Ching-chieh, his assistant, have both resigned.

More trouble for the government loomed in Japanese reports from Tientsin today that the Japanese general, Kotari Nakamura, has issued an ultimatum to Gen. Yu Hsueh-chung against concentration of Chinese troops in the Tientsin district. The report declared that "the Japanese military is exercising the utmost patience and is doing everything to prevent a clash."

Blame Gov. Tang.

The first inclination of officialdom is to blame the loss of Jehol on Gen Tang Yu-lin, the governor of the province, with Marshal Chang Hsueh liang, military leader in north China, a secondary object of criticism.

Sun Fo, president of the legislative yuan, today declared the fault of the collapse rests chiefly on Marshal Chang, who failed to make adequate defense plans.

"Since Chang is responsible for the loss of the three eastern provinces and Jehol," Sun Fo said, "he cannot evade the responsibility. The only course open is his early resignation, enabling the national government to reorganize the affairs of North China."

Form New Battle Lines.

PEIPING, March 5.—(AP)—Japanese airplanes today bombed Chinese concentrations at several points in Jehol province as the forces of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, North China military leader, fell back to positions a few miles to the north of Koupeikow a pass through the Great Wall leading to China proper.

[Jehol City, or Chengtch, the capital of Jehol, was occupied yesterday by a detachment of 138 Japanese soldiers. Jehol City is less than 50 miles from the Koupeikow pass.]

Gen. Sun Tien-ying, Chinese commander who was the defender of Chihfeng, strategic point to the north through which the Japanese swept in their conquest of the province, was said to be making a stand at Wei chang, 55 miles southwest of that point.

Chang Ordered to Fight.

Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese commander in chief, has ordered Marshal Chang to fight until ordered to withdraw. Consequently the Manchurian staff expects his troops to make contact tomorrow with the 14th infantry brigade of Maj. Gen. Heijiro Hattori about 20 miles south of Pingchuan, which is approximately 50 miles east of the provincial capital.

Manchurian headquarters said tonight that two of Marshal Chang's brigades, which bore the brunt of the fighting at Lingyuan, had been virtually wiped out, with the loss of 12,000 in killed, wounded and missing.

Political Intrigue Seen.

The rapid conquest of Jehol was attributed here to political intrigue rather than to Japanese military prowess. It was admitted in Chinese official circles that the administration of Tang Fu-lin, governor of the province, was unpopular, and that the Japanese invaders were assisted by disgruntled peasants, enabling them to negotiate the mountainous country without difficulty.

[Marshal Chang, according to dispatches Saturday, has ordered the arrest of Tang on a charge of desertion. The governor was reported to have fled south from the capital. Troops he headed also were said to have retreated toward passes through the Great Wall.]

The Chinese forces now have taken up new positions at strategic points outside the Great Wall, stretching from Sanshihchiatze to Lusnpingshien, as the first line of defense, and with the Great Wall serving as the second line.

Report Bitter Fighting.

TOKIO, March 5.—(AP)—Rengo (Japanese) News agency dispatches from Jehol City today said the final phase of the Japanese campaign in the northern Chinese province, a move to seize the Great Wall, was producing some of the most bitter fighting of the whole drive.

Cornered Chinese units were resisting desperately, it was said.

The 16th infantry brigade of Maj. Gen. Tadashi Kawanara, en route to Koupeikow, a pass through the wall fought fiercely with remnants of the troops of Jehol province, 10 miles west of the provincial capital, Jehol City. There after the detachment advanced to Changshanku, which is 16 miles northeast of the pass.

Fear Further Invasion.

TIENTSIN, March 5.—(AP)—Capture by the Japanese of Jehol City, capital of Jehol province, and their arrival at the Great Wall of China in the vicinity of Linkou, north of Tientsin, has resulted in increased apprehension that the Japanese are planning a thrust inside the wall.

[Tientsin, the port of Peiping, is about 100 miles south and a little to the west of Jehol City, which was taken over by Japanese invaders Saturday.]

Especially in this vicinity the fear exists that Tientsin is destined to be the scene of Japanese-Chinese clashes. The Japanese concession is virtually an armed camp. Similar activity was evident in the Chinese quarter. The United States' 15th infantry, consisting of 700 men, "as usual is prepared for defense duties," its officers stated.

HAROLD TEEN—NOW THEY CAN WORRY "TOGEDDA"

EUROPE AGITATED BY ROW BETWEEN ITALY AND SERBIA

Balkans Ponder War Possibilities.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Feb. 15.—[By mail.]—The cat and dog animosity between Belgrade and Rome has been observed with uneasiness throughout Europe this winter. Everywhere in the Balkans the questions are asked: Is it a fact that Jugo-Slavia is disintegrating and is a clash between Italy and Jugo-Slavia to take place soon?

The inordinate importance given in Italy to the mutilation of the stone lions at Trogir and the precarious situation of the Jugo-Slav dictatorship have prompted these questions.

Outwardly there is more fulmination in Rome than in Belgrade. The Italians incessantly charge the Serbs with being oppressors of the Croatians and with being aggressive disturbers of the peace of Europe.

Serbs Blame Italy.

The Serbs retort that Italy is the aggressor. They ask why should Jugo-Slavia, a small state of 14 million people, be aggressive toward one of 43 millions. Italy, they say, is to blame for the bad situation because Italy resents the French alliance with Jugo-Slavia and sees in this and in the recent reinforcement of the little entente an obstacle to her penetration of the Balkans. Italy also has unattained aspirations to the Dalmatian coast, they point out.

Furthermore, the organization of a strong Slav state might eventually draw other Slav countries such as Bulgaria into its orbit, making a united Slav federation in central Europe adjoining Italy and running to the Black sea and the borders of Russia. This prospect, although distant, is also obviously repugnant to Italy.

More immediately in the foreground of differences is the peace treaty revision campaign which Italy supports and foments. There is a belief here, too, that part of the Italian agitation against Jugo-Slavia is to bring pressure to bear on the French to make some sacrifice in their relations with Jugo-Slavia as the price of rapprochement with Italy.

Jugo-Slav Outlook.

Consequently, wariness now characterizes the attitude of the Jugo-Slavs. The Jugo-Slav outlook was expounded as follows:

"One of the reasons why the smaller countries of Europe cannot set their houses in order is found in the scheming designs of the bigger powers. We need markets in Italy and Germany, which two countries could absorb most of the produce of the Balkans, but each presents to the smaller countries an economic plan behind which political designs are hidden. This showed itself at the Stress conference. The Balkan problem cannot be settled as long as the bigger countries seek to interfere in the affairs of the smaller ones for their own ends.

"France and other countries loan money to the Balkan countries. But they are not economic loans. They are merely to further political designs."

Discusses Italian Relations.

In discussing Italian relationships this spokesman said:

"We consider Italian policies unsubstantial and not based on realities. They appear to us to base their actions on what they wish. The idea of forming a central European ring with headquarters in Budapest is a high sounding aspiration but has no possibility of realization. The occupation of the Dalmatian coast and the Italian penetration policy is in our mind in the same category."

"There does not now appear to be any immediate propect of serious trouble," he said, "Mussolini's policy over the stone lion mutilation was regrettable. We also regretted the incident. There is now a tendency to smooth over the affair. We are only desirous of living at peace with the Italians, with whom we have mutual trade interests."

RELATIVES SEEK WORD OF MISSING FOUNDRY OFFICER

Relatives of Arthur N. Hayes, 55 years old, 5444 Eastview Park, vice president of Johnston-Jennings Foundry company, 1030 West 38th street, who has been missing one week, asked the police to help in a search or him. He was last seen on Feb. 26, when he parked his car in the public garage at 5547 Harper avenue. He had planned to leave that day for Cleveland on business, but he never arrived there. According to Seward L. Frank, 6543 South Paulina street, an official of the foundry company, Mr. Hayes' business affairs were in good condition. Mr. Hayes was gray hair, blue eyes, is 6 feet tall, and weighs 145 pounds.

HENRY FORWARD, RETIRED TRAFFIC MANAGER, DIES

Henry W. Forward, 74 years old, 6225 Drexel avenue, died yesterday of pneumonia in St. Luke's hospital.

At the time of his death Mr. Forward was consulting traffic officer of the Erie railroad. He had retired as freight traffic manager after 55 years of railroad service which began in 1876 with the Atlantic and Great Western railroad, now part of the Erie.

Mr. Forward was a member of the Union League club and of the Chicago Traffic club. Surviving are two brothers, Dr. C. B. Forward of Urbana, O., and Ross of Cleveland.

78TH ASSEMBLY OF INDIANA WILL ADJOURN TODAY

Administration Slate Is Enacted.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 5.—[Special.]—The seventy-eighth Indiana general assembly will adjourn tomorrow with a record of every administration bill enacted into law. Only one measure was vetoed by Gov. Paul V. McNutt, who controlled the huge Democratic majority of 91 to 9 in the lower house and 43 to 7 in the senate so completely that usually he was able to gain suspension of rules when he wanted to hasten any specific piece of legislation. Not for decades has a governor been so successful in promulgating his entire program or in developing such a far-reaching program.

The legislature, on a new deal pledge, last November passed an income tax law which levies one per cent on every dollar above $1,000 gross income of both individuals and corporations. Indiana Democrats have long promised an income tax, but it was presumed it would be a personal graduated income tax.

Cigaret Tax Up Today.

The legislature increased chain store taxes, will consider a cigaret tax tomorrow, imposed an intangibles tax, and continued the action of the 1932 special session of the 1931 legislature in limiting property tax to $1.50 on every $100 of taxable property, reducing the maximum to $1 in rural areas.

The legislature set up a $15 monthly pension to all indigent persons more than 70 years old and provided for greater state aid for public schools, fixing a teachers' salary minimum and continuing the teacher tenure act.

The legislature vested in the governor unprecedented power to reorganize the state government and to dismiss or appoint any state official, shearing all other state officials, whether elective or appointive, of inherent power. The governor now controls every state executive office.

Primary Repeal Dropped.

Plans to repeal the state primary election law were finally dropped. But hereafter Indianans will vote nominally for President, not presidential electors, and except on voting machines state and national ballots will be separate. Municipal elections due next November were postponed one year.

The state bone dry law has been repealed, provision made for Indiana to vote within two months for delegates to a convention to determine the state's attitude toward repeal of the eighteenth amendment, a system of control and license of manufacture, importation, and sale of malt and vinous products has been set out, the ban since 1925 on prescription of medicinal liquor is lifted, and licensed pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog races is legalized.

The legislature passed a uniform salaries code for county officials, in some cases cutting public expenditures and in others raising them. More money is made available for the governor than in recent years.

New Bank Code Enacted.

A new bank code law was rushed through, enabling Indiana banks to limit withdrawals on both checking and savings accounts, thus keeping most of them open last week despite the nation-wide moratoria.

Democrats have an overwhelming majority on the Supreme court also. Most administration legislation is supposed to have been informally approved by a Supreme court majority before it was enacted. However, court action is expected by critics of the executive centralization, sales tax, election postponement, and other acts of the legislature, who say they were deliberate partisan moves designed solely to aid the McNutt faction of the Democratic party.

TEN MILE AREA IN PORTO RICO IS RUINED BY STORM

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, March 5.—(AP)—Damage of more than $1,000,000 and the deaths of at least 20 persons resulted from a flood that swept Mayaguez Friday night, it was officially reported today.

Besides, many persons are missing, and it is believed they were washed out to sea by the flood of the Yaguez river, swollen by 18 inches of rain, most of which fell in 12 hours. The torrential rain was restricted to an area probably not more than ten miles long, with the Yagues the main outlet.

More than 300 houses were destroyed in the city, a port on the Porto Rican west coast, today's reports said. Probably 500 families are temporarily homeless. Medical workers, governmental employes, and others have been sent to the stricken city. Five hundred cots have been shipped to Mayaguez.

Rites in Wilmette Today for Mrs. Lida Taylor, 63

Funeral services for Mrs. Lida W. Taylor, 63 years old, 835 Central avenue, Wilmette, who died in the Evanston hospital Saturday following an operation, will be held at the home at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Memorial Park cemetery. Mrs. Taylor was the widow of Arthur J. Taylor, who was general manager of the American Slicing Machine company. She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and the Wilmette Women's club. Surviving are two sons, Dr. Arthur C. and Frederick W. Taylor.

ROOSEVELT TO ATTEND FUNERAL RITES TODAY FOR SENATOR WALSH

Washington, D. C., March 5.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt and other high officials of the government will attend the funeral services for the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana in the senate chamber tomorrow morning. The President was a close friend of Senator Walsh, and had named the Montana statesman to serve as attorney general in his cabinet.

There will be a full Roman Catholic funeral service conducted by Archbishop Curley of Baltimore, the second Catholic funeral, so senate attaches say, ever held in the senate chamber.

The state funeral will be held at the request of Senator Walsh's widow, the former Señora Naives Perez Chaumont, who was with her husband when he died on the train returning from their honeymoon in Florida last week. After the services the body will be taken to Helena, Mont., for burial.

RURAL SCHOOLS CLOSE TODAY IN HONOR OF TOBIN

Rural schools of the county will be closed today in respect to Edward J. Tobin, Cook county superintendent of schools for the last 23 years, who died last Thursday in his home, 11350 Longwood drive. Chicago schools and those in the suburbs will open as usual.

Funeral services for Mr. Tobin will be held at 10 o'clock this morning at St. Margaret's church, 99th and Throop streets. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

A large number of the 100,000 pupils in schools under Mr. Tobin's jurisdiction are expected to attend the services. County and city officials also plan to be present.

Mr. Tobin was 61 years old and had held the office of county superintendent of schools since 1910. He began teaching at the age of 20 in the Bremen, Cook county school. His widow, Belle, and one daughter, Ruth, survive.

VAGRANCY TRIAL IS DUE TODAY FOR SPIKE O'DONNELL

Edward [Spike] O'Donnell, south side beer hoodlum, and Sanford [Gimp] Rosenbaum, an ex-convict, are scheduled to go on trial this morning before Judge Frank M. Padden on charges of vagrancy. They were arrested together a week ago.

"O'Donnell is a dissolute person without lawful means of support and should be put to work in the stone quarry at the Bridewell," said Chief of Detectives Schoemaker.

The chief said he would produce a dozen character witnesses in court, but not for "Spike." These witnesses, he added, would be policemen who have known the beer boss for many years. Through friends O'Donnell asserted yesterday that Chief Schoemaker was all wrong, that he is not a vagabond.

SOME WOMEN ALWAYS ATTRACT

FORWARD—

GRAINS ADVANCE UNTIL BANKING HOLIDAY RULES

Close of Market Inspires Caution.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

An unheard of money and banking situation, which suddenly became acute at the end of the week, necessitated the closing of banks, and grain and security commodity exchanges. It is not expected this situation will last long, but in the meantime the disposition on the part of all interests is towards conservatism. A scarcity of cash has restricted business in all lines.

Friday's markets were active, excited, and higher. Trading in wheat on that day on the Chicago Board of Trade reached the largest aggregate in a long time, sales being 42,412,000 bushels. The open interest was reduced 1,168,000 bushels.

Foreign markets have had a big advance and wheat in Chicago is higher than in Winnipeg and Liverpool, figured on an exchange basis. In Winnipeg it was equal to about $1 a bushel on Saturday.

Prices Advance in Chicago.

In Chicago wheat advanced from 46⅜ to 49½ cents for May, that delivery gaining nearly 1 cent on July and selling even with it at the last. There were net gains of 1⅛ to 1⅜ cents, May and July closing at 48⅞ to 48¾ cents and September at 49⅞ to 50 cents.

Winter wheat conditions are said to be the lowest known. The point made by H. C. Donovan, the crop expert, is that when the abandoned acreage in the southwest is taken out the plant condition of most of the remaining acreage will be low, suggesting an unusually small crop. Estimates on the winter wheat crop are for 370,000,000 to 400,000,000 bushels. Last year's official final was 462,000,000, while the record, set in 1931, was 787,000,000 bushels.

With smaller production, recent large surpluses will be drawn on heavily, but aggregate supplies for the season will be more than sufficient for home requirements. Efforts are being made to hold a conference of representatives of leading wheat exporting countries to consider acreage control, which is regarded as highly essential if farming interests are to be materially aided.

Europe Buys Wheat Freely.

The southern hemisphere and Canada are supplying European importing countries, which are buying fairly. Visible supplies are steadily decreasing and, barring financial troubles, the world's wheat situation is hardening, the general belief being that wheat and all markets have been well liquidated and that the constructive side is to become the most remunerative.

The newly appointed head of the farm board is to consolidate all the bureaus, and is quoted as saying he is against price stabilization and the farm allotment plan. It is also understood that the Grain Stabilization corporation has sold its cash wheat and its holdings of futures is light. Prices for the week follow:

	May.	July.	September.
Monday	46¼-47⅛	47⅛-48	48¼-49
Tuesday	46⅜-47⅝	47 -48⅛	48 -49
Wednesday	46½-47⅞	47⅛-48⅛	48⅛-49
Thursday	46⅝-47⅞	47 -48¼	48 -49⅛
Friday	46⅞-49½	47⅛-49⅝	48⅛-50⅝
Saturday	Holiday

Corn Prospects Brighter.

Corn specialists believe that should wheat prices remain strong and score fair advances, corn farmers will be enabled to secure a little more money for their grain. The movement of corn from the country is of fair volume. Cash grain comes to leading markets and is bought by elevator interests and is hedged by sales of futures. American corn is very close to an export level, but business is not heavy. New lows on all futures were made Tuesday, followed by a rally. May corn closed Friday at 24⅞ to 24¾ cents, July, 26⅝ cents, and September, 27⅞ to 28 cents, gains being ⅛ to ⅜ cents. Prices for the week follow:

New Low for Oats.

Liquidation in oats, following the weakness in corn, brought prices down to new low levels. Cash interests were credited with buying on the decline, and the rally in other grains helped the market to recover a good part of the losses, but the net decline for the week was ¼ to ⅝ cents. May closed at 16 to 16¼ cents, July, 16⅜ to 16½ cents, and September, 17 cents.

Bank Note Company Gets Rush of Scrip Orders

New York, March 5.—(AP)—The office of the American Bank Note company was one of the busiest places in the city today, with calls from all over the nation for information about clearing house notes and with orders placed by many states for the printing of such notes. The company's printing force was increased from 300 to 1,000 employés, but officials said it would take several days for even this large force to turn out any quantity of the notes.

'Standard' Oil of Colorado Denied Use of That Name

Denver, Colo., March 5.—[Special.]—The Standard Oil Company of Colorado and its subsidiary, the Standard Oil and Gas company, were enjoined today in a federal District court order from using the trade name "Standard." Federal District Judge T. B. Kennedy of Cheyenne, Wyo., handed down the decision.

U. S. Troubles Cast Pall On London Stock

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1933: The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 5.—The American situation dominated the London stock markets the whole week. Business generally was at a low ebb, the Atlantic depression bringing unsettlement in the financial weather.

A further decline in forward dollars pushed up sterling and forced gold down, bringing a halt to speculation and a relapse to activity. There was evidence of many large operators becoming uneasy at the disconcerting effect of banking developments in America. They have been hurrying to secure any profits available and close their books, even in the active section of South African gold mines.

There was a noticeable change of sentiment pointing to a reactionary trend compared with the atmosphere of imperturbability of the last few months. Bears now have taken the places rendered vacant by the departure of bulls and there are signs that large bear positions are being built up.

Sees Trade Languishing.

Now experts conclude that with political uncertainties, serious and otherwise, in various parts of the world, international trade must continue to dwindle and, therefore, they hold out little expectation for substantial recovery in the British industrial position in the early future.

Disturbing events in the far east and Germany, combined with America, produced unusual activity in the foreign exchange market. These events tended to operate strongly in favor of sterling, which, however, again has been the subject of strong official control. Apparently there is at present very close coöperation between the New York, London, and Paris exchange authorities. Although some speculation is discernible, coöperation has kept it strictly within bounds, with the authorities obviously having full control of the situation.

The recent large gold purchases of the Bank of England are part of the plan for control of sterling. Large purchases of bar gold now are being made almost daily in behalf of the Bank of England. During the week officially ending Wednesday, just $40,000,000 (at par) was bought, making a total influx of roughly $152,500,000 since Britain's December debt payment to America.

Gold Bought in New York.

The major portion of the gold is understood to have been purchased in New York, where it remains earmarked, and only a small portion was secured on the open market. The bank's total gold holding now stands at $755,000,000, the highest since July, 1931. Banking department reserves have risen over $210,000,000 since Christmas and now stand at $333,500,000, which is less than $25,000,000 below the high record.

Most sections of the stock market reflected various adverse factors. The gilt-edged market was disappointing, with the additional restraining influence of increasing new issues and the advance of the New York bank rate.

DOLLAR SLUMPS IN PARIS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 5.—The dollar, which continues to be the preoccupation of French financial circles, slumped to 25.325 early in the week and stayed there. The belief here is that it will not sink appreciably below that figure. At the same time that the dollar sank to the gold shipping point on Tuesday it was difficult to deal in forward dollars, there being few lenders even for short periods. The forward discount was not listed, which was an unusual procedure.

The British equalization fund, which has been busy for many weeks in holding down sterling by buying dollars, converted part of its dollars into earmarked gold and balanced its dollar account by the sale of the remainder of its dollar credit in the Paris market.

The Paris bourse, including rentes [government bonds], improved the latter half of the week, due to final voting of the budget bill and improvement reported from Wall street.

WATERWAY-LAKE PACKAGE FREIGHT TRADE LAUNCHED

Establishment of a new package freight service between Chicago and Montreal, an enterprise undertaken as a result of the opening of the new Illinois waterway, was announced yesterday by the Tree Line Navigation Company of Canada through its Chicago agents, James P. Robinson, Inc. The service will begin April 25.

The new service, a definite indication of the growing importance of Chicago as a center of water transportation, will afford shippers of the middle west an opportunity to transport package freight entirely by water from points along the new waterway to Chicago and thence to Montreal and to foreign ports.

Three ships of the Tree Line company, the Cedarbay, Willowbay, and Maplebay, will make regular weekly calls at Chicago, and en route to Montreal will stop at Detroit, Hamilton, and Toronto. The vessels will load and discharge at North Pier terminals. The three ships have a measurement capacity of about 80,000 cubic feet.

It is expected by officials of the company that within a few months large cargoes will be moving towards Chicago on barges through the Illinois waterway to be transhipped here for Montreal and again transhipped there for trans-Atlantic ports.

Mexico Accepts Only Cash for Duties on U. S. Exports

Laredo, Tex., March 5.—(AP)—On instructions from the Mexican consulate general in New York not to accept checks in payment advanced on duties and fees on exports into Mexico, the Mexican consulate here today required cash payments from all customs brokers and others handling exportations across the border. Thus far, brokers and others have been able to meet requirements despite scarcity of cash because of a five day Texas banking moratorium.

HOW RESTRICTION ON DEPOSITS WORKS IN OHIO

Cleveland May Get 5 Per Cent of Savings.

Cleveland, O., March 5.—[Special.]—Cleveland banks have been operating under a 5 per cent withdrawal restriction for six business days.

All depositors have been allowed to withdraw 5 per cent of each individual account—commercial or savings—carried in a bank, the percentage being computed on the balance in the account at the close of business at the close of the last preceding business day.

The restriction became operative in the Cleveland banks on Monday, Feb. 27. The 5 per cent withdrawal was allowed on the balances in accounts at the close of business Saturday, Feb. 25.

What May Be Done.

Depositors who desire it are given the 5 per cent in cash. Those who do not desire to carry away the currency may transfer it to new accounts, which, under the law, enacted last Monday night by the Ohio legislature, are segregated from the frozen accounts represented by the 95 per cent that cannot be withdrawn.

Under the new law the banks are not allowed to invest these segregated accounts but must hold them in cash or its equivalent or deposit them in the federal reserve bank.

So far as the depositor is concerned, these new accounts have the same status as their old ones before the limitation became effective. Checks may be drawn against them freely, and the money withdrawn at any time.

Must Be Kept Liquid.

New deposits in the newly created segregated accounts are allowed and also must be kept liquid.

With only one exception, the Cleveland banks are allowing depositors who have mortgages in the same banks in which they have their accounts to use the frozen 95 per cent of their old accounts as an offset against the mortgages.

In the week that the limitation has been in operation here the banks have done little else in the transaction of business except the handling of 5 per cent withdrawals or the transfer of the 5 per cent from the old to the new accounts.

CANADIAN BANKS ARE LIQUID, SAYS MINISTER RHODES

"Canadian banks are in a very strong and exceptionally liquid position, wholly capable of meeting any demands made upon them. The situation in the United States arises from domestic conditions in that country and any reaction upon our position should result to our advantage.

The feeling in responsible circles seemed to be that the American bank holiday will relieve the financial situation, although it may hamper for a time the normal trade between the two countries.

During the last few days there has been a heavy flow of American money into Canadian banks, especially those along the border. There was a suggestion that perhaps banks in the dominion might find themselves flooded with deposits and might be placed in the position of having more deposits at 3 per cent interest than they could profitably handle. With the American holiday, however, it was expected that the flow of money across the border would fall off.

The pound sterling was quoted this morning at $4.04, as compared with last night's close of $4.02 in Canadian funds.

HEADS OF NEW YORK EXCHANGE TO STUDY EMERGENCY TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 5.—Governors of the New York stock exchange will hold a special meeting at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning and, while the purpose is not disclosed, it is assumed that steps will be taken to delegate to a special committee or other agency the authority to act in matters that may come up in the emergency.

By action of the governors on Saturday morning, the exchange was ordered closed during the bank holiday. Meanwhile, questions in connection with uncompleted transactions, disputes over trades and other unfinished business may arise.

The governors have already suspended delivery on all contracts, except those which may be cleared or settled through the stock clearing corporation. Presumably, it will now become necessary to set up emergency machinery to act as long as the suspension of trading lasts. Such procedure was followed when the exchange closed after the outbreak of the world war. A special committee of five was created at that time.

While members of the stock exchange and of the curb are prohibited from making "any contracts for the purchase or sale or the borrowing or lending of securities and also from permitting their offices or facilities" to be used for such purpose, it is possible that an outside or unofficial market will spring up if the exchanges remain closed for any considerable length of time. Such a market did develop when the exchanges were closed after the outbreak of the war.

AMER. SMELTING REPORTS '32 NET LOSS AT $4,506,175

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 5.—The American Smelting and Refining company reports for 1932 a net loss of $4,506,175 after all charges and taxes and reserves for depreciation and depletion. This compares with a net profit of $875,976 or $1.75 a share on the 500,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par value. The low prices of nonferrous metals accounted almost entirely for the poor showing of the company last year, according to Simon Guggenheim, president.

The balance sheet as of Dec. 31 shows current and miscellaneous assets of $63,128,293 and current liabilities of $8,585,843, compared with $69,156,873 and $10,979,908, respectively, at the close of 1931. Cash on hand and in transit increased from $3,886,315 at the end of 1931 to $4,945,352 on Dec. 31 last, while United States government securities declined from $17,057,665 to $16,066,363. Metal stocks at cost or market, which ever lower, totaled $30,200,626, against $33,044,755 at the close of 1931.

The profit and loss surplus account was reduced from $23,349,167 to $15,552,990 at the close of 1932. Capital assets amounted to $144,382,190, and total assets were $207,510,484.

Lancashire Cotton Group to Weigh Board Closing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 5.—Lancashire cotton circles are much concerned over the position of America. It is understood that directors of the Liverpool Cotton exchange will hold a meeting early Monday morning to consider the situation. Opinion among members is that the exchange will not close unless it is absolutely necessary. It is recognized, however, that with exchange restrictions in force, trading conditions are very difficult. It is not thought likely the Manchester royal exchange will be closed, though cotton brokerage firms in Manchester will inevitably be affected by Liverpool's action.

Anglo-Argentine Trade Negotiations Progressing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 5.—It was officially denied today that the Anglo-Argentine trade negotiations have broken down, and it was stated that they are progressing favorably. An effort is now being made to free frozen peso credits in Argentina so as to restore the normal flow of trade between Great Britain and Argentina.

BANK HOLIDAY SERVES TO SLOW STEEL INDUSTRY

Pig Iron Output Up in February.

Cleveland, O., March 5.—(AP)—The magazine Steel said today the steel industry was marking time until after the inauguration for further definition of the new administration's business policies.

"With bank holidays and restrictions tending to paralyze trade," it added, "steel demand was approaching a standstill during the last week."

Hope for Improvement.

"Among steel makers the belief prevails that the very sharpness of the banking stringency carries with it some assurance that it will be speedily remedied, if necessary by federal guarantees of bank deposits.

"As automotive manufacture has been the only outstanding industry recently in steel consumption, the effect (of the stringency) appears relatively more serious in that direction than elsewhere.

Pig Iron Output Up.

"A further substantial gain in pig iron production in February carried the daily average output to 19,752 gross tons, up 7.6 per cent from January, though the month's total due to the fewer number of days, was 553,067 tons, compared with 568,735 tons. Action on finished steel prices indicated there will be no widespread revision for second quarter. The market for structural shapes, with awards for the week 9,800 tons, presents an unbalanced appearance.

"Pig iron sales are down sharply, due to inability of many small foundries to finance purchases. Steel's finished steel composite this week is up 20 cents to $46.50, and the iron and steel composite is up four cents to $28.35, mainly on sheet price adjustments. The scrap composite has advanced 8 cents to $6.41, due to the strengthening of open hearth grades at Pittsburgh."

Brown Shoe Company Plant in Litchfield Opens

BETH. STEEL IN 1932 HAS LOSS OF $19,404,431

No Bonus Payments Made Officers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 5.—Under the modified bonus plan, which was adopted at the last meeting of stockholders, no payments were made in 1932 to officers and heads of departments of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, according to the annual report of the corporation, released for publication today. The original plan provided for a bonus distribution before deducting depreciation from income, with the result that in prosperous years several millions of dollars were distributed to executives of the company.

The company reported a loss of $19,404,431 for 1932, compared with a net income of $115,745 in 1931. Gross sales and earnings for 1932 totaled $98,467,226, compared with $186,541,195 in 1931.

Operations Slower.

Operations of the company's steel plants during 1932 were at an average of 16.9 per cent of capacity compared with 38.6 per cent in the preceding year.

The balance sheet of the corporation as of Dec. 31 last shows current assets of $111,050,005 and current liabilities of $15,246,904, as compared with $141,873,201 and $25,563,503, respectively, at the close of 1931. The reduction in inventories from $67,656,267 at the close of 1931 to $51,469,406 on Dec. 31 last, and the decline from $23,938,213 to $12,606,010 in accounts and notes receivable were the most important changes in current assets.

Over 23 Million Cash.

United States government securities amounted to $22,366,287 against $24,225,318 in 1931, and cash declined from $23,466,753 to $21,976,775 on last Dec. 31. Property account after reserves for depreciation was $515,294,408, as compared with $530,813,610.

Accounts payable and accrued liabilities of $13,211,825 were substantially below the $18,938,063 at the end of 1931. Funded debt was reduced from $136,971,877 to $126,212,420. Total assets at the close of 1932 were $659,322,587, against $706,820,776. Surplus was reduced from $114,844,280 at the beginning of 1932 to $89,221,676 at the close of the year.

CANADIANS GIVE AMERICANS ONLY 85C ON DOLLAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., March 5.—Closing of the banking houses in New York state created a mild panic among the traveling public here over the week-end when American citizens found that in some cases their bills were refused as tender, and that 85 cents Canadian was as much as could be realized on the United States dollar. Banks accepted dollars at par, but the leading hotels would accept American money only in payment of hotel bills and at par value only.

Many were the altercations on Saturday in shops and hotels between travelers accustomed to getting $1.20 for their American bills, when they discovered their money might as well have been counterfeit. The sudden reverse of fortune left them bewildered and indignant. Many week-end trippers perforce confined their activities to their hotels, as they were without the wherewithal to amuse themselves outside. The dinner and supper dance went down on the hotel bill.

General Bronze.

Will you please give me some information on General Bronze?—C. Y.

General Bronze corporation is one of the leaders in the field of architectural and ornamental bronze and iron works. Volume of business fluctuates with activity in the building industry.

Despite a decline from 1931 of more than 40 per cent in gross earnings for 1932, a drastic reduction in operating expenses, smaller depreciation charges and interest charges enabled the company to operate at a profit of $148,000, or 54 cents per share, in 1932, against loss of $560,000 in 1931. Net loss for 1930 was $969,000, against net income of $1,128,000, or $4.01 per common share, for 1929.

On Dec. 31, 1932, current assets were $3,383,000 and current liabilities were $461,000. Cash assets alone were $1,784,000. Working capital was $2,922,000, against $2,950,000 the year before.

Funded debt, principally debentures due 1940, totals $2,124,000. Capital stock consists of 273,880 shares of $5 par common. Nothing has been paid on the stock since the 25 cent dividend on Sept. 1, 1930.

Although the showing made by the company during 1932 is creditable in view of existing conditions, the stock must be considered speculative until evidence of sustained earning power is apparent.

Bankers Life.

I would appreciate a report on the present status of Bankers Life company of Des Moines, Ia. Thank you for this and past favors.—B. A. E.

Bankers Life company [Des Moines] was established in 1879. It is a legal reserve mutual life insurance company. It is under able management.

Insurance in force at the close of 1932 was $844,846,000, against $913,146,000 the year before, $941,905,000 on Dec. 31, 1930, and $711,630,000 on Dec. 31, 1923.

At the close of 1932 net reserves were $133,140,000 and surplus and special funds were $7,464,000.

Income during 1932 was $39,585,000 and disbursements were $32,663,000. In 1931 income was $42,654,000 and disbursements were $27,635,000.

First Money of U. S. Based on Trinkets

BY REUBEN CAHN.

The earliest American money was wampum, that being a string of shells an Indian wore around his neck when he dressed up. The redskins necktie was not merely something which the New England colonist used to trick a native out of some choice skins. The beads were actually recognized in the colonies as the coin of the realm. A Massachusetts order in council of 1637 made wampum full legal tender up to a shilling, at the rate of six black beads or three white beads to a penny. And a Connecticut settler was authorized by law to pay taxes in wampum up to ten pounds sterling.

In an identical way, tobacco was established as the money of Virginia, rice of South Carolina, wool of Rhode Island and rum in many places. The value of each of this miscellany of trinkets and vegetables was always reckoned in terms of pennies, shillings and pounds of the English monetary system. The colonists brought along small amounts of metallic money when they came across. And as this accumulated, it circulated freely among the people.

Spanish Coins Used.

Traffic with the Spanish colonies brought in some of their coins, but trade as a whole was handicapped because of the lack of an adequate currency. The demand for money was so persistent that a mint was set up in New England, but opposition by the home government soon put a stop to that.

Due to the lack of metallic money, the colonial governments fell into the practice of printing paper money. As there wasn't any other circulating medium, the paper passed for a time as if it were the real article. However, since the issuing governments could maintain no adequate reserves for redeeming the notes as they fell due, and as the colonies found the device so easy that there was a constant temptation to put out more, the notes fell in value.

When depreciation went so far as to appall the authorities, a new set of bills would be put out, with the officials swearing that this time it would be different and the issue would be confined to what could be redeemed. But the promises, even when backed by good intentions, were never kept.

English Furnish Money.

At length, the English merchants complained that they were having difficulties making collections for goods sold and delivered because of the variable currency. The English then yielded and sent over a quantity of silver and bronze, and put the colonies on a sound metallic basis. So it stood when the Bostonians gave their famous tea party.

Wars are financed in three ways: by taxing, borrowing or inflating. Taxation was not available to the American revolutionists because the precipitating cause of the war was the objection of the colonists to taxation. Borrowing was impossible, except to a slight extent with France, because the new country had not established its credit. The only feasible means of financing the war, therefore, was by inflation, by issuing irredeemable paper currency. And that is precisely what was done.

Continental Currency Depreciates.

The second continental congress authorized an issue of paper money, which eventually ran to something over $290,000,000. The new currency sustained its value for about a year, and then began to fall. By 1777, it had half the purchasing power of gold. By 1780, the bills were worth 2½ cents on the dollar. Eventually they deteriorated until a dollar of gold would buy a thousand of paper. Thus our revolutionary war financiers were setting a mark for the Germans to shoot at a century and a half later. The states also issued currency during the revolution, to about the same total amount, and with similar consequences.

On account of this experience, antipathy to paper money was widespread at the end of the war. And when the constitution was adopted, it was expressly provided that states could not issue currency. And the permission given to the federal government was not done enthusiastically.

Hamilton Gave Warning.

"The emitting of paper money by the authority of government," wrote Alexander Hamilton in his report of Dec. 13, 1790, "is wisely prohibited to the individual states by the national constitution; and the spirit of that prohibition ought not to be disregarded by the government of the United States. Though paper emissions, under a general authority, might have some advantages not applicable, and be free from some disadvantages which are applicable, to the like emissions by the states separately, yet they are of a nature so liable to abuse—and, it may even be affirmed, so certain of being abused—that the wisdom of the government will be shown in never trusting itself with the use of so seducing and dangerous an expedient."

Although several kinds of notes, receivable by the government for dues were issued subsequently, no circulating notes which were payable on demand and in coin were put out by the United States government until the outbreak of the civil war.

LONDON, ROME MAY ACT TODAY ON EXCHANGES

Japanese Boards Are Closed.

LONDON, March 5.—(AP)—It was understood tonight that principal dealers will meet at 9:30 a. m. Monday to decide what course to follow regarding foreign exchange dealings.

Foreign exchange quotations were suspended here Saturday, and there was no quotation on gold. Whether a similar policy will be pursued Monday was not learned tonight, although it was believed that resumption of the dealings Monday would be possible.

Italy May Act.

ROME, March 5.—(AP)—It was reported late tonight that the government may suspend foreign exchange operations Monday and perhaps Tuesday also.

On Saturday dealing in the dollar was virtually suspended in Rome, following upon word of the suspension of foreign exchange operations in London.

Buenos Aires Amazed.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

BUENOS AIRES, March 5.—Although the bank situation in the United States was featured in huge type in yesterday's newspapers here, the attitude in business circles was one of amazement rather than alarm. Argentine grain traders were inclined to believe that the continuation of the situation in the United States would benefit Argentine cereals by relieving them of competition with American stocks. All exchange operations were suspended awaiting tomorrow's developments, but otherwise there was little direct effect.

Japanese Exchanges Close.

TOKIO, March 6.—[Monday.]—(AP)—Banks throughout Japan today suspended foreign exchange operations. Resumption of this trade Tuesday will depend upon developments in the United States banking situation.

Stock exchanges in Tokio, Osaka, and Nagoya similarly were closed today except for limited dealings in Japanese government bonds. The raw silk exchanges in Yokohama and Kobe were shut today, and will remain closed Tuesday. Other commodity markets, except rice, were closed today.

Egypt Awaits Action.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

CAIRO, March 5.—In view of the fact that the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges are closed, the Egyptian exchange is contemplating the same course, the final decision depending on whether or not Liverpool closes. That will be known tomorrow morning. The same applies to the stock exchange here, which depends on the London and Paris exchanges.

Cairo is crowded with American tourists, several cruising ships having arrived almost simultaneously. Today being Sunday, all banks and tourists agencies were closed, but when the visitors tried at hotels to convert dollars into local currency, they were offered as little as seventeen piastres to the dollar, whereas only yesterday they still had received twenty-eight. At par the dollar is worth twenty. Consequently the tourists are holding on to their dollars awaiting further developments.

CANADA MARTS STAGE A BOOM IN GOLD STOCKS

TORONTO, Ont., March 5.—(AP)—Gold stocks bounded upward on the standard mining exchange yesterday on the strength of reports over broke wires that the United States would revalue the gold dollar. There was no confirmation of the report.

SHIP SUBSIDIES ARE CONDEMNED BY LINE OWNERS

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, March 5.—Passenger fares of all lines operating between America and Europe will remain unchanged until October, it was agreed at the regular spring meeting of the Atlantic conference here.

When the north Atlantic steamship lines belonging to this association assemble for their next regular meeting in the fall it is hoped the various plans for rationalization of the shipping industry proposed at this gathering will have kept them from slipping much further into the hole created by existing hard times and lack of business.

This rationalization will be sought first through a coöperative attempt by all competing lines to gauge closely the relation of available tonnage to prospective traffic, which it is now conceded will even be more curtailed this summer than it has ever been. Then all companies will be called upon to accept such recommendations as the shipping czar, Emil Lederer of New York, may make for playing up surplus tonnage and cancellation of sailings. Also, as far as possible competing lines will try to avoid scheduling numerous ship departures from the same port on the same date.

Can't Cut Subsidies.

The conference, however, was powerless to do anything about the "real curse of the shipping industry today —government subsidies," according to Dr. Leisler Kiep of the Hamburg America lines and chairman of the meeting just ended. We must look to the forthcoming world economic conference for relief from that evil, Dr. Kiep said. There can be no scrapping of obsolete ships as long as we have subsidies with politicians who know nothing about the shipping business.

Officials of most of the leading lines of the world signed a resolution condemning subsidies, which was adopted unanimously by the shipping subcommittee of the International Chamber of Commerce. This resolution will be put before the economic conference as one of the principal recommendations of the International Chamber of Commerce for hastening world-wide recovery.

Would Reclassify Ships.

A proposal for the reclassification of ships of various lines designed to secure closer relationship between classes came under review at the meeting just concluded. Dr. Kiep explained that one of the principal problems is the growing popularity of cabin class liners, which are slower than the bigger first class express liners but are newer and cheaper. He suggested that all liners henceforth should be designated as first class, and fares for each vessel should be based upon age, size, and speed.

For example, the new United States liner Manhattan and her sister ship, the Washington, to be commissioned soon, are at present rated as cabin class and offer lower fares than the came company's Leviathan, which is larger and requires one day less for crossing the ocean. The Leviathan, however, was built in 1913 and has been operated by the United States lines since its reconditioning in 1923, while the Manhattan and Washington have the advantage of most modern comforts, the latest ideas in decorations, ship designing, and luxury of appointments.

A representative of the United States lines delegated to the conference, however, firmly opposed the suggestion the Leviathan, Manhattan, and Washington should be classified in the same category and with the same passenger fares.

THREE BIG BANKS HANDLE MOST OF FINN'S TRADE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland—Contrary to the situation in the United States, where banks are numerous, the whole of the banking system of Finland is in the hands of a very few houses. There are three big banks, three of moderate size and four small ones.

There used to be a few more, but when the crisis drove them into difficulties, measures were taken to amalgamate them with some of the bigger banks. Thus almost no depositors have suffered any losses in Finland through bank failures, although some shareholders have incurred reverses.

The crisis has forced minor reductions of dividends, however. All three of the big banks have cut their payments to shareholders. The rate was as follows: Nordiska Forenings-banken, from 18 per cent in 1931 to 17 per cent in 1932; Kansallis Osake-Pankki, from 16 per cent to 14 per cent, and Helsingfors Aktiebank, from 10 per cent to 7 per cent.

Smaller banks have pared their dividend payments by about the same ratio.

By far the bulk of the country's business is carried on by the three big banks. The returns indicate that so far as the banking situation is concerned, at least Finland is still financially on a sound foundation.

THREE CHAINS REPORT SALES FOR FEBRUARY

Sales of $4,650,848 for the four weeks ended Feb. 25 were reported yesterday by the National Tea company. Sales in the corresponding period in 1932 were $5,169,555, a decrease of 10 per cent. Inasmuch as prices have declined considerably since the 1932 report, the return indicates that there has been little change in tonnage sales. The company had 1,385 stores in operation on Feb. 25, compared with 1,497 stores the year before.

Montgomery Ward & Co. reported sales of $10,113,826 for February, 1933, compared with $11,963,366 in February, 1932. This was a decrease of $1,849,540, or 15.46 per cent.

Kroger Grocery and Baking company reported sales of $14,842,436 for the four weeks ended Feb. 25, compared with $16,747,226 for the like period in 1932, a decline of 11 per cent. The average number of stores in operation was 4,707, compared with 4,874 a year ago.

DICK TRACY—The Helping Hand

BUREAU CHIEFS ASKED TO AID IN SLASHING COSTS

Called Before Special House Committee.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 5.—[Special.]—As a new move toward cutting down the cost of government, heads of departments have been asked to appear before a special house committee to show cause why the permanent appropriations over which they have jurisdiction should not be repealed or converted to the status of regular annual appropriations.

Present permanent and indefinite appropriations over which neither budget nor congress has control amount to more than a billion and a quarter dollars. Provided for by past laws, these appropriations go on year after year until repealed.

Treasury Door Open.

Chairman Anthony J. Griffin [Dem., N. Y.], of the special committee on permanent appropriations summed up the reasons back of the new move in these words:

"Whether there has been any waste due to such a large number of permanent appropriations cannot be estimated or even guessed. One thing, however, is certain, the pressure of the dead hand of past congresses keeps open the door of the treasury to unsupervised and unregulated expenditures."

Chairman Griffin estimated that permanent annual appropriations for 1934 would amount to 1 billion 399 millions. Interest on the public debt and debt retirement funds make up the bulk of the items. Virtually all bureaus and independent establishments, however, have a few items which are sure of finances each year regardless of budgetary action.

Striving for Economy.

"The chief objective of our researches and studies is to try to effect national economies," he said. "Many of these permanent specific appropriations were provided for many years ago to meet certain conditions then existing, but which, in the course of time, have been completely altered. Nevertheless these provisions of the law being mandatory, the appropriations are automatically allotted.

"Since its appointment the subcommittee has made substantial progress in the study of the permanent appropriations with a view of determining which should be converted to an annual appropriation status.

"Believing that no action should be recommended without first giving the heads of the various departments opportunity to be heard, the committee has advised each of them to appear before the committee."

Frisco Plans Refinancing Under New Federal Law

New York, March 5.—(AP)—The St. Louis-San Francisco railway management is preparing to shape its plan of readjustment for the new bankruptcy bill with executive approval of the measure, it was learned yesterday in railroad quarters. Directors of the road are scheduled to meet next Monday to take such steps as will enable the road to avail itself of the new legislation.

ALLEGHANY CORP. INVOLVED IN RAIL PROBLEM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 5.—The coming financial readjustment for the Missouri Pacific railroad means, it is pointed out, that the burden of supporting the structure of the Alleghany corporation will rest almost entirely on the Chesapeake and Ohio railway. The Alleghany corporation is the holding organization through which O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen control the two railways, and also the New York, Chicago and St. Louis (Nickel Plate), Erie, Pere Marquette, and Wheeling. The Van Sweringens also hold an unexercised option on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois.

The Alleghany corporation was formed in Maryland on Jan. 26, 1929, to refund by means of public financing the disbursements made by the Van Sweringens in purchasing railroads. Its purchase of the Missouri Pacific, which gave rise to the management's chief present problem, was made through open market stock acquisitions in subsequent months.

German Reichsbank to Pay $16,000,000 on Its Credits

BASEL, Switzerland, March 5.—(AP)—The German reichsbank will repay $16,000,000 of a credit amounting to $86,000,000 due today, the Bank for International Settlements announced this afternoon. The Bank of France, the Bank of England, and the federal reserve bank, which participated in the credit, have agreed to renew in equal shares the remaining $70,000,000 for three months at 4 per cent.

Pursuant to order date March 1, 1933, of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Indiana, Indianapolis Division, in the matter of Publix-Fitzpatrick-McElroy, Inc., Bankrupt, No. 7758, the undersigned Trustee will offer for sale on Monday, March 13, 1933, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., at No. 940 Consolidated building, Indianapolis, Indiana, the bankrupt's interest in certain theater leases and in the equipment, supplies, and personal property located on and in each of said leased theaters and used in the operation thereof. The theater leases to be offered for sale cover the following theaters in the following Indiana towns:

Copies of all of said leases are on deposit and the order of sale showing the manner and conditions thereof and the special restrictions surrounding the sale of theaters of the Rivoli theater at Muncie and the Tivoli theater at Richmond, are on file in the office of Carl Wilde, Esq., Referee in Bankruptcy, 1010 Hume-Mansur Building, Indianapolis, Indiana, and may there be inspected by all persons interested. For information or details write to the undersigned or to his attorney, Austin V. Clifford, 941 Consolidated building, Indianapolis, Indiana.

IRVING W. LEMAUX,

MEN—MONDAY!

If you call Monday between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m. you will have found a wholly new prospect in life. First of all we do not have anything for downtrodden, discouraged or forgotten men, but only for the DETERMINED and those who believe that PERMANENT INDEPENDENCE merits a full day's honest work, day after day. We wish men who are interested in growing incomes, paid weekly, without investment or deposit or purchase. This large company successfully transacts business world-wide and leads wherever its products are known. Throughout the period of depression it has gained constantly, creating one new record sales month after another and one record sales year after another.

You may work up into this business the way V. J. Cerny did, whose latest earnings were $125 for a half week, or like H. H. Powell, who made $100 in the same period, or E. T. Johnson, whose half-week earnings were $40. Even on the basis of the lowest of these earnings you can understand why we say that no man should make less than $4,000 a year in this business, while a good many others earn up to $7,500 in a year—year after year. T. Brennan and Robert Holland made $20 each in one day, and D. Kovich made $40 in one day. Another single day's earnings, made by W. Mondale, amounted to $80. True, these men have been with us for some months, some for months; one or two longer. But men new in this splendid independent business also succeed. G. L. Daley, a new man, made $23 in his first three days. A man really has to work and be diligent and faithful to his opportunity. We are not offering a "snap" because they do not exist—never have—never will. But the fact is that the utmost you must compute on a smaller income—from $125 to possibly $200 in a month—maybe that for two or three months. Past experience counts for little, character counts for much. We prefer men between 24 to 47 years old, in good health, and courteous.

If you have responsibilities and wish to secure something that will last, that is not governed by seasons or layoffs; if you wish to work 52 weeks in every year and are not controlled by weather, storms, or anything else, then we will give you such opportunity as we believe you can take care of. If you can CLICK we will make a place for you and have successful men train you. Be here between 9 and 1, Monday, March 6. Call at Room 329 Madison-Kedzie bldg., 9 S. Kedzie-av.

MEN.

WE WILL START A LIMITED FEW ADDITIONAL MEN AT ONCE. IF YOU WANT FULL-TIME WORK IN A PERMANENT POSITION AND HAVE GOOD CHARACTER REFERENCES, COME IN MONDAY MORNING FOR AN INTERVIEW.

If you are adaptable to this work, if you have the disposition to study and strive to acquire skill in what you do, and if you have good reputation and the will to succeed, we will employ you and back you in permanent work that is regularly paying established men in all parts of this country and throughout the world $4,000.00, $6,000.00, $7,000.00, $8,000.00 per year and higher. Time incomes are cash-and just as stable and permanent as any business or professional positions possibly could be. Such earnings represent success, and they are available to men who can think and work successfully.

This company is now in the greatest success of its history. 1932 was its most progressive year, and its most turbulent year. Nation have consistently grown stronger, happier, and more and more prosperous. 1933 starts for new records!

Those who are inexperienced in specialty sales work, must take the necessary time to learn and to acquire skill. During this time they must be willing and satisfied to get along on nominal earnings at $125.00 to $200.00 per month if necessary (some men, $115-$150). We cannot tell you how long it will take you to do this—whether one month or six months—but we do know that if you have the qualifications to satisfy our requirements to secure a position with us, with reasonable study, practice, good character and diligence with these duties you can be genuinely assured of making a success which will afford you the higher incomes. PAID IN CASH.

We are not interested in men satisfied to get along on part-time earnings. A minimum schedule of 48 hours' work per week is required, with several hours additional for instruction.

If you feel you can qualify, and if you really would like to learn how to do this work and to make the kind of money success brings, this opportunity is yours. Please call for personal interview at our branch general offices, Monday morning, March 6, 9 to 1, at Suite 430 Hyde Park Bank Bldg., 53d and Lake Park-av.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Good Luck Assured

SOLUTION TO THE CLEWS TO JUDD'S MURDER

Had Judd committed suicide and fallen over on the OPENED ledger as he was found there could not possibly have been blood spots on the COVER of the book.

As it was proved the butler was alone with Judd at the time, this was conclusive evidence of murder.
